Hi. As you know, we heard the final answer yesterday with Dominic speaking with Dave outlining the bank's review/decision of the request.

Needless to say, we are disappointed that the bank couldn't make the exception in this case. We apologize that it took so long however it was necessary since the bank really appreciates your family's relationship and took it to the top of the house - including John Cryan, the CEO yesterday to try to get it done. At the end, it came down to a global corporate decision to maintain neutrality to any political situation and not lend money to a highly politically exposed person (PEP).

We have been told by everyone that this is a timing issue so that once the candidacy is settled we can proceed with business as usual with you. To that extent, our global boss Fabrizio Campelli is free to chat with you, as is John Cryan should your Dad want to call him. I would be happy to coordinate these calls for you so you can be assured of our senior management's commitment to your family and business.

I am reachable on cell anytime today or the weekend to discuss. Hope you are feeling well.

Best,
Rosemary
