INTERESTS OF AMICI

The amici States—New York, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oregon, Vermont, and Washington—and the District of Columbia have received law-enforcement funding under the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant (Byrne-JAG) and its predecessor grants for nearly fifty years. Congress designed Byrne-JAG as a mandatory formula grant to ensure that States and localities have a reliable stream of funding to support law-enforcement programs tailored to local needs. The amici States use Byrne-JAG funds to support a diverse array of critical law-enforcement programs, ranging from efforts to decrease gun violence to projects combating opioid addiction.

The United States Attorney General now claims authority to withhold Byrne-JAG funding from States and localities that have made law-enforcement policy judgments that federal law permits, but with which he disagrees. Specifically, he contends that he may deny grants to States and localities that limit their voluntary involvement with enforcing federal immigration policy because those jurisdictions have concluded that fostering a relationship of trust between their law-enforcement officials and their immigrant communities will promote public safety. The Byrne-JAG statute does not authorize the U.S. Attorney General's position, which is also contrary to the federalism principles that Congress enshrined in the Byrne-JAG program.

The amici States have adopted different approaches to cooperating with the federal government in immigration matters. Whether or not they believe that Chicago's approach would be optimal for them, the amici States join this brief because they believe that the Byrne-JAG statute permits the City of Chicago to adopt a law-enforcement policy suited to local needs without financial penalty.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Byrne-JAG program has its origins in the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, Pub. L. No. 90-351, Title I, 82 Stat. 197, which created the first block grants for States and localities to use for law-enforcement and criminal justice programs.¹ Recognizing that “crime is essentially a local problem that must be dealt with by State and local governments,” 82 Stat. at 197, Congress designed the grant to provide a reliable funding stream that States and localities could use in accordance with state and local law-enforcement policies.²

To ensure federal deference to local priorities, Congress prohibited federal agencies and executive-branch officials from using law-enforcement grants such as Byrne-JAG to “exercise any direction, supervision, or control over any police force or any other law enforcement agency of any State or any political subdivision thereof.” Id. § 518(a), 82 Stat. at 208. Although Congress has repeatedly modified the structure and terms of the law-enforcement grants authorized under Title I of the 1968 Act, the prohibition originally set forth in § 518 of the 1968 Act remains in

No. 96-157, 93 Stat. 1167, 1179 (amending Title I of the 1968 Act and reauthorizing law-enforcement block grants to States and local governments); Justice Assistance Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-473, 98 Stat. 1837, 2077-85 (same); Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, Pub. L. No. 100-690, pt. E, 102 Stat. 4181, 4329 (amending Title I of the 1968 Act and creating a formula law-enforcement grant); Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-162, § 1111, 119 Stat. 2960, 3094 (2006) (amending Title I of the 1968 Act and creating the modern Byrne-JAG program).

² See, e.g., S. Rep. No. 90-1097, at 2 (1968) (stating that Congress sought to encourage States and localities to adopt programs “based upon their evaluation of State and local problems of law enforcement”) (excerpt available in Addendum (Add.) to this brief at 2); see also Ely v. Velde, 451 F.2d 1130, 1136 (4th Cir. 1971) (reviewing the legislative history of the 1968 Act and concluding that “[t]he dominant concern of Congress apparently was to guard against any tendency towards federalization of local police and law enforcement agencies”).

effect with virtually no modification, and is now codified in the same chapter of the United States Code as Byrne-JAG. See 34 U.S.C. § 10228(a).³

The modern Byrne-JAG program was codified in 2006. See supra n.1. See 34 U.S.C. §§ 10151–58. Like its predecessors, Byrne-JAG aims to “give state and local governments more flexibility to spend money for programs that work for them rather than to impose a ‘one size fits all’ solution.” H.R. Rep. No. 109-233, at 89 (2005). To that end, the Byrne-JAG statute creates a mandatory formula grant and gives recipients substantial discretion to use funds for eight “broad purposes,” id., including law enforcement, crime prevention and education, and drug treatment, see 34 U.S.C. § 10152(a)(1).

The amici States have received Byrne-JAG funding from the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) since 2006, as well as funding from Byrne-JAG’s predecessor grant programs. Amici have used the funds to support a diverse array of law-enforcement programs tailored to local needs. For example, New York has used Byrne-JAG funding to support a multicounty program to combat gun violence, improve criminal records systems, enhance forensic laboratories, and support prosecution and defense services.⁴ California has used Byrne-JAG funds for education, employment, and substance abuse services; prevention and intervention initiatives for high-risk students; and

³ The full text of § 10228(a) provides as follows:

Nothing in this chapter or any other Act shall be construed to authorize any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over any police force or any other criminal justice agency of any State or any political subdivision thereof.

diversion and re-entry programs.⁵ Hawaii has used Byrne-JAG funds to combat sexual assault, eliminate elder abuse, and to reduce recidivism.⁶ Massachusetts plans to use its 2017 Byrne-JAG funds to reduce gun violence, combat the opioid crisis, and promote community-based policing programs.⁷ And Connecticut plans to use 2017 Byrne-JAG funds to reduce recidivism, prevent gun violence, provide training to mentally ill offenders, and provide treatment for offenders addicted to opioids and heroin.⁸ Without Byrne-JAG funds, the amici States may be forced to cut these critical programs.

DOJ has announced that the new immigration-related conditions imposed on the States will be substantively identical to the conditions it will impose on localities like Chicago.⁹ Like Chicago, the amici States have not received Byrne-JAG awards for fiscal year 2017.

ARGUMENT

THE NEW CONDITIONS ARE UNLAWFUL

A. DOJ Has No Authority to Impose New Generally-Applicable Substantive Conditions.

The text of the Byrne-JAG statute creates a mandatory formula grant, leaving no room for DOJ to deviate from the legislative formula by imposing new generally-applicable substantive conditions. The structure and legislative history of the statute and predecessor law-enforcement grants confirm DOJ's lack of authority to prescribe new general conditions like the notice, access, and compliance conditions.¹⁰ The structure and legislative history of 34 U.S.C. § 10153(a)(5)(D) likewise make clear that DOJ cannot require States and localities to comply with collateral statutes like 8 U.S.C. § 1373, because such statutes are not “applicable Federal laws,” see 34 U.S.C. § 10153(a)(5)(D).

1. The text, structure, and history of Byrne-JAG confirm that Congress did not authorize DOJ to add new generally-applicable substantive conditions.

Under basic separation-of-powers principles, an executive “agency literally has no power to act . . . unless and until Congress confers power upon it.” Louisiana Pub. Serv. Comm’n v. FCC, 476 U.S. 355, 374 (1986). The Byrne-JAG statute contains no express provision authorizing DOJ to impose new generally-applicable substantive conditions like the ones at issue in this case. The statute instead provides that “the Attorney General shall . . . allocate” grant money based on the statutory formula. 34 U.S.C. § 10156(a)(1). Formula grants leave no discretion to the administering agency: if a grantee satisfies the statutory requirements, the grantee is entitled to what the formula dictates. See, e.g., City of Los Angeles v. McLaughlin, 865 F.2d 1084, 1088 (9th Cir. 1989).¹¹

Other provisions of Byrne-JAG confirm Congress’s intent to prevent DOJ from deviating from Congress’s statutory formula. For example, § 10157(b) permits DOJ to reserve up to five percent of appropriated funds and reallocate them to a State or locality if DOJ determines that reallocation is necessary to combat “extraordinary increases in crime” or to “mitigate significant programmatic harm resulting from” the formula. By expressly restricting DOJ’s authority to redirect Byrne-JAG funds, Congress clearly signaled that DOJ must otherwise abide by the statutory formula. See, e.g., Department of Homeland Sec. v. MacLean, 135 S. Ct. 913, 919 (2015) (provision of express authority in one section of statute implies intent to exclude such authority elsewhere).¹²

The Byrne-JAG statute’s legislative history leads to the same conclusion. From the time it first created a law-enforcement block grant program in 1968, Congress has sought to ensure that such grants do not become a means for federal agencies to control, direct, or supervise state and local law enforcement. See supra at 2-3; infra at 13-14. In enacting Byrne-JAG—the latest version of the 1968 program (supra at 2)—Congress reaffirmed this priority, stating that the grant was designed to “give State and local governments more flexibility to spend money for programs that work for them rather than to impose a ‘one size fits all’ solution.” H.R. Rep. No. 109-233, at 89 (2005).

¹¹ See also Paul G. Dembling & Malcolm S. Mason, Essentials of Grant Law Practice § 5.03, at 33-35 (1991). (Add. 7-8.)

What is more, since the 1990s, Congress has repeatedly considered and rejected legislation that would withhold grant funding as a penalty for noncooperation with federal immigration law.¹³ When Congress enacted the modern Byrne-JAG program in 2006, it repealed the only immigration-related condition imposed on grants under Byrne-JAG’s predecessor program. See 42 U.S.C. § 3753(a)(11) (2000) (requiring grantees to inform federal immigration authorities of an alien’s criminal conviction); Pub. L. No. 109-162, § 1111(a)(1), 119 Stat. at 3094 (repeal). And more recently, Congress has considered and rejected legislative proposals to impose funding conditions on so-called “sanctuary cities,” including under Byrne-JAG.¹⁴ DOJ’s attempt to adopt the same policy through administrative processes is thus suspect. See Food & Drug Admin. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 529 U.S. 120, 159-60 (2000).

When Congress has wanted to authorize deviations from the statutory formula, it has done so explicitly and authorized only modest withholdings. For example, a State that fails to “substantially implement” relevant provisions of the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act (SORNA) “shall not receive 10 percent of the funds” it would otherwise receive under Byrne-

¹⁴ See, e.g., Stop Dangerous Sanctuary Cities Act, H.R. 5654, 114th Cong. § 4 (2016); Stop Dangerous Sanctuary Cities Act, S. 3100, 114th Cong. § 4 (2016); Enforce the Law for Sanctuary Cities Act, H.R. 3009, 114th Cong. § 3 (2015); Mobilizing Against Sanctuary Cities Act, H.R. 3002, 114th Cong. § 2 (2015); Stop Sanctuary Policies and Protect Americans Act, S. 2146, 114th Cong. § 3(a) (2015); Stop Sanctuary Cities Act, S. 1814, 114th Cong. § 2 (2015). JAG. See 34 U.S.C. § 20927(a).¹⁵ The amici States are unaware of Congress ever imposing a condition on Byrne-JAG that would withhold all funding, as DOJ now seeks to do.

For the structural reasons this Court has already articulated, the U.S. Attorney General is wrong to contend that 34 U.S.C. § 10102(a)(6) authorizes DOJ to impose any of the new conditions.¹⁶ See City of Chicago v. Sessions, 264 F. Supp. 3d 933, 941-43 (N.D. Ill. 2017); see also City of Philadelphia v. Sessions, No. 17-cv-3894, 2017 WL 5489476, at *26 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 15, 2017) (holding that § 10102(a)(6) does not authorize DOJ to impose the notice or access conditions).

The U.S. Attorney General’s reliance on § 10102(a)(6) is also misplaced for a separate reason: the phrase “special conditions” in § 10102(a)(6) is a term of art that refers only to those grant conditions that are “tailored to problems perceived in a particular grant project”; the term is not “generally applicable to all grants under a particular grant program,” Dembling & Mason, supra, § 11.01, at 107. (Add. at 9.)

When Congress amended § 10102(a)(6) in 2006 to add a reference to “special conditions,” a DOJ regulation defined that term to mean a condition that is imposed for a limited time to address financial or performance concerns specific to a particular applicant, 28 C.F.R. § 66.12(a) (2006)—for example, a requirement that a financially unstable grantee provide a more detailed financial report, id. § 66.12(b). Under established approaches to statutory construction, this history and context strongly support reading § 10102(a)(6) to incorporate DOJ’s earlier regulatory definition.¹⁷ When a statute uses a term of art, courts “assume” that “Congress intended it to have its established meaning.” McDermott Int’l, Inc. v. Wilander, 498 U.S. 337, 342 (1991). See also City of Philadelphia, 2017 WL 5489476, at *27 (finding that the phrase “special condition” is a term of art that does not authorize the new conditions). Had Congress intended to grant DOJ broader authority, it would have done so explicitly.

¹⁶ The full text of § 10102(a)(6) provides that the Assistant Attorney General, who is the head of the Office of Justice Programs, “shall . . . exercise such other powers and functions as may be vested in the Assistant Attorney General pursuant to this chapter or by delegation of the Attorney General, including placing special conditions on all grants, and determining priority purposes for formula grants.”

2. The compliance condition is not authorized by 34 U.S.C. § 10153(a)(5)(D).

Section 10153(a)(5)(D) of Title 34 requires grant applicants to provide “[a] certification, made in a form acceptable to the Attorney General,” that assures “the applicant will comply with all provisions of this part and all other applicable Federal laws.” The U.S. Attorney General incorrectly contends that § 10153(a)(5)(D) is a grant of authority to determine what constitutes an “applicable federal law,” and that 8 U.S.C. § 1373 is one such law. (See Mem. of Law in Supp. of Def.’s Mot. to Dismiss at 7-9, ECF No. 139.) Although this Court did not preliminarily enjoin the requirement to comply with § 1373 based on the parties’ textual arguments, the location of § 10153 and its legislative history make clear that Chicago’s interpretation is the only one that can be correct: § 10153(a)(5)(D) refers only to statutes that govern federal grant-making by their express terms.¹⁸ a. Section 10153 appears in a section of Title 34 entitled “Applications,” which lays out technical and ministerial application requirements for grant applicants, such as the certifications and assurances that applicants must provide. Had Congress intended § 10153(a)(5)(D) to be a broad grant of authority to DOJ, it would have said so explicitly, as it has done in other statutes.¹⁹ See Whitman v. American Trucking Ass’ns, Inc., 531 U.S. 457, 468 (2001).

b. The relevant language was first enacted in the Justice System Improvement Act of 1979, which reauthorized a predecessor to Byrne-JAG. See Pub. L. No. 96-157, § 2, secs. 401-05, 93 Stat. 1167, 1179-92 (1979) (amending the 1968 Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act).²⁰ When the 1979 Act was drafted, DOJ understood the term “applicable Federal laws” to mean those statutes that govern the provision of federal financial assistance. For example, DOJ’s Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA)—the agency responsible for administering law-enforcement grants—issued manuals providing “guidance to grantees on their responsibilities of [sic] applicable federal laws and regulations” (emphasis added).²¹ A 1978 manual lists the laws DOJ understood to be applicable to federal law-enforcement grants, and the list contains only statutes governing federal grant-making. (Add. 36-39.) Other contemporaneous DOJ documents take the same approach,²² as did a contemporaneous circular from the Office of Management and Budget circular, which advised federal grant-in-aid programs of the laws applicable to federal grant funding. See 42 Fed. Reg. 45,828, 45,864 (Sept. 12, 1977). (Add. 97-98.)

The phrase “applicable Federal law” must be construed to have this meaning. Absent some contrary indication, when Congress incorporates a term of art into a statute, courts “assume” that “Congress intended” the language “to have its established meaning.” McDermott, 498 U.S. at 342. The inference is particularly strong here because Congress knew of DOJ’s understanding. In 1977, DOJ prepared a report identifying the laws that DOJ deemed applicable to LEAA grants: approximately twenty federal laws that, by their terms, governed federal grant-making.²³ The report was distributed to every Member of Congress and every Governor—among others—and was subject to public comment and hearings.²⁴

The U.S. Attorney General’s construction of § 10153(a)(5)(D) thus unjustifiably expands DOJ’s authority under Byrne-JAG. Where Congress has made clear that a jurisdiction is entitled to funding on certain terms—as Congress does when creating a non-discretionary formula grant program—DOJ cannot substitute its own terms.

DOJ’s interpretation of § 10153(a)(5)(D) is also contrary to one of the main goals of the 1979 Act that enacted the relevant language: to reduce administrative burdens associated with DOJ grants.²⁵ One of the main concerns highlighted in DOJ’s 1977 report was that the then-body of federal laws applicable to LEAA grants—the twenty cross-cutting statutes that applied to federal grant-making—imposed excessive burdens on grantees.²⁶ It is thus unlikely that the relevant language would have been supported by DOJ and enacted by Congress if either entity believed it could be used to drastically increase the compliance burdens on States and localities.

Finally, even if § 10153(a)(5)(D) were to give DOJ some authority to determine whether a law is “applicable” for purposes of Title 34’s certification requirement, the legislative history of the Byrne-JAG statute makes clear that 8 U.S.C. § 1373 is not such a law. The same legislation that enacted 8 U.S.C. § 1373 in September 1996 also funded a predecessor to Byrne-JAG.²⁷ And while that legislation imposed a number of conditions on the use of Byrne grants, it imposed no immigration-related conditions. Moreover, Congress has repeatedly considered and rejected imposing information-sharing requirements on grantees as a condition of federal funding, which makes DOJ's authority to impose the conditions inherently suspect.²⁸ See Brown & Williamson, 529 U.S. at 159-60.

²⁵ See, e.g., Federal Assistance to State and Local Criminal Justice Agencies: Hearing Before the Subcomm. on Criminal Laws and Procedures of the S. Comm. on the Judiciary, 95th Cong. 383 (1978) (transmittal letter from U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell) (stating that the bill was “designed” to “simplify[] the grant process”) (Add. 106); id. at 7 (statement of Senator Edward Kennedy) (explaining that one purpose of the bill was to eliminate “red tape”) (Add. 105); Office of Representative Peter W. Rodino, Press Release, Committee Approves LEAA Reorganization (May 10, 1979) (noting the 1979 Act was “designed to drastically reduce the red tape which has plagued the process of getting federal assistance to states and local governments” (quotation marks omitted)) (Add. 109).

B. The New Conditions Are Inconsistent with 34 U.S.C. § 10228(a).

All three of the conditions are also invalid under a separate statutory provision, which was adopted in 1968 at the same time as the first law-enforcement block grant program, and which has consistently prohibited executive-branch officials from using law-enforcement grants to exert “any direction, supervision, or control” over any state or local police force or criminal justice agency. Pub. L. No. 90-351, § 518(a), 82 Stat. at 208. The current version of that prohibition, which is codified in the same chapter of the United States Code as the Byrne-JAG statute, provides that “[n]othing in this chapter or any other Act shall be construed to authorize any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over any police force or any other criminal justice agency of any State or any political subdivision thereof.” 34 U.S.C. § 10228(a) (emphasis added). The repeated use of “any” signals Congress’s intent to speak broadly, see Ali v. Federal Bureau of Prisons, 552 U.S. 214, 218-19 (2008)—and in the present context, to prohibit all agency action that could interfere with state and local authority over law enforcement. The new conditions violate this statutory prohibition by seeking to control, direct, and supervise state and local law enforcement.

The legislative history of § 10228(a) confirms this meaning. Opponents of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 expressed concerns that the U.S. Attorney General would use law-enforcement grants to coerce States and localities into adopting federal law-enforcement priorities.²⁹ Supporters responded that § 10228, which was pending before Congress as part of the 1968 Act, would prohibit such control. U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark testified it would violate both “the mandate and spirit” of § 10228(a) to withhold funds because police departments were not run “the way the Attorney General says they must,” and that § 10228(a) prevented DOJ from imposing extra-statutory conditions on law-enforcement grants.³⁰ Reviewing this history, the only appellate decision to construe § 10228 has observed that § 10228(a)’s purpose was “to shield the routine operations of local police forces from ongoing control by [DOJ]—a control which conceivably could turn the local police into an arm of the federal government.” Ely, 451 F.2d at 1136.

Although arising in a different context, the Supreme Court’s anti-commandeering jurisprudence sheds further light on what it means to prohibit federal “direction” and “control” of state and local law-enforcement entities. The Court’s cases make clear that anti-commandeering prohibitions prevent the federal government from compelling States to enact federal programs, see New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 188 (1992), or compelling state officers to enforce such programs, see Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898, 930, 935 (1997). Printz suggests at least two actions constitute impermissible “direction” or “control”: requiring state law-enforcement officers to assist in “the administration of a federally enacted regulatory scheme,” and requiring those officers to receive information as part of their administrative responsibilities. Id. at 904.³¹

Here, the U.S. Attorney General’s proposed immigration-related conditions conscript States into administering federal immigration policy in violation of § 10228(a). New conditions requiring grantees to report violations of 8 U.S.C. § 1373 to DOJ effectively turn States and localities into an enforcement arm of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). Other new conditions (i) require state officials to administer federal immigration policy by mandating that they respond to DHS requests for information, and (ii) violate anti-commandeering principles by requiring state officials to devote staff, resources, and real property to facilitate federal agents’ access to aliens in correctional facilities. (See Decl. of Alan R. Hanson, Ex. B, at 41-42 (ECF No. 32-1).) If requiring state officials to “accept” a form is impermissible direction, see Printz, 521 U.S. at 904, then surely requiring them to accept and assist federal officials at state facilities is too. See also Kennedy v. Allera, 612 F.3d 261, 269 (4th Cir. 2010) (SORNA does not violate Tenth Amendment because it does not require States to accept sex offender registrations).

CONCLUSION

This Court should deny the U.S. Attorney General’s motion to dismiss.

³¹ The legislation at issue in Printz, the Brady Act, violated these prohibitions by requiring local officers to run background checks on handgun purchasers, and requiring state officers “to accept” forms from gun dealers. 521 U.S. at 904, 905, 934.

OMNIBUS CRIME CONTROL AND SAFE STREETS ACT OF 1967

APRIL 20, 1968.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. McCLELLAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary,

REPORT

Submitted the following
together with

MINORITY, INDIVIDUAL, AND ADDITIONAL VIEWS

[To accompany S. 917]

The Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 917) to assist State and local governments in reducing the incidence of crime, to increase the effectiveness, fairness, and coordination of law enforcement and criminal justice systems at all levels of government, and for other purposes, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, and recommends that the bill, as amended, do pass.

AMENDMENT

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That this Act may be cited as the "Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1967".

TITLE I—LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE

DECLARATIONS AND PURPOSE

Congress finds that the high incidence of crime in the United States threatens the peace, security, and general welfare of the Nation and its citizens. To prevent crime and to insure the greater safety of the people, law enforcement efforts must be better coordinated, intensified, and made more effective at all levels of government.

Congress finds further that crime is essentially a local problem that must be dealt with by State and local governments if it is to be controlled effectively.

It is therefore the declared policy of the Congress to assist State and local governments in strengthening and improving law enforcement at every level by national assistance. It is the purpose of this title to (1) encourage States and units of general local government to prepare and adopt comprehensive plans based upon their evaluation of State and local problems of law enforcement; (2) authorize grants to States and units of local government in order to improve and strengthen law enforcement; and (3) encourage research and development directed toward the improvement of law enforcement and the development of new methods for the prevention and reduction of crime and the detection and apprehension of criminals.

PART A—LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 101. (a) There is hereby established within the Department of Justice, under the general authority of the Attorney General, a Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (hereafter referred to in this title as "Administration").

(b) The Administration shall be composed of an Administrator of Law Enforcement Assistance and two Associate Administrators of Law Enforcement Assistance, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. No more than two members of the Administration shall be of the same political party, and members shall be appointed with due regard to their fitness, knowledge, and experience to perform the functions, powers, and duties vested in the Administration by this title.

(c) It shall be the duty of the Administration to exercise all of the functions, powers, and duties created and established by this title, except as otherwise provided.

PART B—PLANNING GRANTS

SEC. 201. It is the purpose of this part to encourage States and units of general local government to prepare and adopt comprehensive law enforcement plans based on their evaluation of State and local problems of law enforcement.

SEC. 202. The Administration is authorized to make grants to States, units of general local government, or combinations of such States or units of local government for preparing, developing, or revising law enforcement plans to carry out the purpose set forth in section 302: Provided, however, That no unit of general local government or combination of such units shall be eligible for a grant under this part unless such unit or combination has a population of not less than fifty thousand persons.

SEC. 203. A grant authorized under section 202 shall not exceed 80 per centum of the total cost of the preparation, development, or revision of a plan.

SEC. 204. The Administration may advance such grants authorized under section 202 upon application for the purposes described. Such application shall:

- (1) Set forth programs and activities designed to carry out the purposes of section 302.
- (2) Contain such information as the Administration may prescribe in accordance with section 301.

PART C—GRANTS FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT PURPOSES

SEC. 301. It is the purpose of this part to encourage States and units of general local government to carry out programs and projects to improve and strengthen law enforcement.

SEC. 302. (a) The Administration is authorized to make grants to States, units of general local government, and combinations of such States or units of general local government to improve and strengthen law enforcement: Provided however, That no unit of general local government or combination of such units shall be eligible for a grant under this part unless such unit or combination has a population of not less than fifty thousand persons.

(b) Under this part grants may be made pursuant to an application which is approved under section 303 for—

(1) Public protection, including the development, demonstration, evaluation, implementation, and purchase of methods, devices, facilities, and equipment designed to improve and strengthen law enforcement and reduce crime in public and private places.

(2) The recruiting of law enforcement personnel and the training of personnel in law enforcement.

(3) Public education relating to crime prevention and encouraging respect for law and order, including education programs in schools and programs to

INDIVIDUAL VIEWS MESSRS. DIRKSEN, HRUSKA, SCOTT, AND THURMOND ON TITLES I, II, AND III

Since 1960, serious crime in the United States has increased an alarming 88 percent. This fact is cause for the gravest national concern.

This is not a partisan issue. It is an American tragedy.

In consideration of the omnibus crime bill, we have sought to strengthen and improve the proposal sent to Congress. To a limited extent, these efforts have been successful. The committee bill, however, still needs further upgrading and refinement.

MINORITY CONTRIBUTIONS

The Omnibus Crime Control Act reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee bears an unmistakable imprint of constructive Republican contributions. These contributions range from new substantive provisions to perfecting technical changes.

ORGANIZED CRIME

The most significant Republican contributions to the bill are those which increase significantly the tools and financial resources to combat the scourge of organized crime. In this regard, two major provisions were added at our insistence.

First, the substance of Amendment 223, introduced on June 29, 1967, by Senators Dirksen, Hruska, Scott, Thurmond and several others, has been approved. The amendment creates a category of special financial assistance to state and local governments. Such assistance has two purposes:

(1) To assist in the establishment or expansion of special prosecuting groups on a local level to ferret out and prosecute the multifarious illegal activities of organized crime.

(2) To provide special federal assistance in establishing a coordinated intelligence network among states including computerized data banks of syndicate operations and activities. These efforts would be under the direction and control of State Organized Crime Councils. A special authorization up to $15 million for fiscal year 1969 would be available for this purpose.

ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE

Another major contribution to efforts to combat organized crime is found in Title III of the committee bill. To a great degree, this title reflects the provisions of S. 2050, the proposed Electronic Surveillance Act of 1967, which was introduced by Senators Dirksen, Hruska, Scott, Thurmond, Percy, Hansen and others in June of 1967. Included in the committee bill is the formula for strict impartial court authorization and supervision of surveillance and a broad prohibition on private snooping. S. 2050 was introduced in the wake of the Supreme Court's decision of Berger v. New York. It was tailored to meet the constitutional requirements imposed by that decision.

INDEPENDENT LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION

In pursuit of one of the same objectives of the block grant provisions, namely the prevention of federal domination and control of state and local law enforcement, the Criminal Laws Subcommittee, upon the initiative of Chairman McClellan, added a provision to its bill for the establishment of an independent Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to administer the federal aid program. The administering agency was to be headed by a three-man board appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. Minority party representation was assured by the requirement that one of the three men would be a representative of the party out of power.

The subcommittee bill provided:

In the exercise of its functions, powers, and duties, the Administration shall be independent of the Attorney General and other offices and officers of the Department of Justice.

This was deemed essential to insure that, as much as possible, the law enforcement assistance program would be administered impartially and free from political pressures. Also, it was considered to be important to refrain from placing in the hands of one man the potential power of granting or denying federal financial assistance in very large amounts to state and city law enforcement agencies.

It is regrettable that the provision for the independent status of the Administration was dropped from the bill. We attempted unsuccessfully to reinstate the provision in the full committee, and will urge its adoption on the floor of the Senate.

In short, we don't want the Attorney General, the so-called "Mr. Big" of federal law enforcement to become the director of state and local law enforcement as well. It is true that the Attorney General is chief law enforcement officer of the federal government. But he is not chief law enforcement officer of states or cities. We believe America does not want him to serve in this latter capacity.

Organization and management experts may object to a dilution of executive authority, but we want no part of a national police force. Such dilution, if a price at all, is a small price to pay to preserve a fundamental balance of police power.

We don't want this bill to become the vehicle for the imposition of federal guidelines, controls, and domination.

POLICE SALARY SUPPORT

The Administration's original proposal to Congress in early 1967 contained a feature allowing up to one-third of each federal grant to be utilized for compensation of law enforcement personnel. In the hearing record of both the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, this provision proved to be quite controversial. When the House Committee reported the bill, the provision for salary support was deleted. Commenting on this action, the committee report on page 6 stated:

The committee deleted all authority to use grant funds authorized by the bill for the purpose of direct compensation to police and other law enforcement personnel other than for training programs or for the performance of innovative functions. Deletion of authority to use Federal funds for local law enforcement personnel compensation underscores the committee's concern that responsibility for law enforcement not be shifted from State and local government level. It is anticipated that local governments, as the cost for research, innovative services, training, and new equipment developments are shared by the Federal Government in the programs authorized in the bill will be able to devote more of their local resources to the solution of personnel compensation problems. The committee recognizes that adequate compensation for law enforcement personnel is one of the most vexing problems in the fight against crime.

We wholeheartedly subscribe to the House committee's view. There is indeed a grave concern that responsibility for law enforcement not be shifted from the state and local levels.

The Senate Criminal Laws Subcommittee also deleted a similar provision by an overwhelming vote, but subsequently a somewhat modified salary provision was reinstated. In modified form, up to one-third of each grant could be made available to pay one-half the cost of salary increases for law enforcement personnel. Even with this modification, we must strongly oppose the provision. This is not because we are indifferent to the low pay of the nation's law enforcement officers. It is because we fear that "he who pays the piper calls the tune" and that dependence upon the federal government for salaries could be an easy street to federal domination and control.

In addition, this provision would not have equal application or provide equal benefits to all law enforcement officials. In fact, most of the nation's 400,000 police officers would not be eligible because under the committee bill only local jurisdictions or groups of local jurisdictions with populations of more than 50,000 would be eligible to apply for grant aid. Thus, those smaller jurisdictions, some 80 percent of the nation's total with 58 percent of the population, would not be eligible for grant assistance. Who is to say that the officers of City A which meets the population standard could receive federal salary supplements whereas the officers of City B, perhaps an adjoining community whose population requirements do not meet the test, could not qualify.

The unfairness of the Administration proposal becomes crystal clear when it is considered that not all large cities and policemen will be beneficiaries of federal law enforcement grants. This is so because there is simply not enough federal money to go around. Thus, City C which perhaps got its application in early or whose political leadership was in favor with the Department of Justice received a grant and salary support, while City D with the same needs, the same crime problems and same low pay scales was left out because its application was tardy or not in compliance with contemporary federal notions on what a good application should contain. What could be more manifestly unfair?

Finally, it should be noted that once salary support is granted, it would be difficult if not impossible for the federal government to abandon its assistance, thus leaving a permanent dependence on the federal treasury.

There are overlapping characteristics among these classifications and categories of grant programs. For example, in a particular mandatory grant, although the grant is not considered "discretionary," there is some degree of discretionary judgment for the grantor agency in fact.

There are also subcategories of grants within these general classifications, and certain terminology important to understanding the grant field.

For example, since certain grants are made as a matter of right to recipients who qualify. These are called "entitlement" grants.

When, as is typical, grants to states (typically mandatory) require submission of a state plan for approval, they are called "state plan" grants.

"Formula" grants are so called because the amount of these grants are determined by a mathematical formula. The formula for a grant program is often based on the amount appropriately spent by the state, without a maximum limit. There may or may not be a minimum limit, but the state can claim larger amounts if it spends more in a manner conforming to the statute or rules. Such grants are called "open-ended."

These various categories are referred to throughout this and the following chapters.

§ 5.02 DISCRETIONARY GRANTS

Discretionary grant programs authorize grants for stated purposes.⁹ When authorized, and moneys are appropriated, the program must be carried out by the Government agency. The question is, to whom will the grants go? In that sense, the statutory program is discretionary as among the applicants.

An application is necessary. The grantor agency may make a grant or refuse it to a particular applicant. It may ordinarily make a grant in a large amount or small amount; occasionally the amount of the grant is fixed by statute, but that is not usual. The grantor agency may make no grant at all if no applications appear sufficiently meritorious; but it may not make a general refusal on fiscal grounds to consider applications on their merits without a disclosure to the Congress and the opportunity for congressional action.

When grants are discussed without indication of the type of grant, it is often discretionary grants that are intended, although mandatory grants are far larger in total dollar amount and probably more important in social impact.

§ 5.03 MANDATORY GRANTS

A mandatory grant program is one in which entitlement to the grant is established by statute.⁷ If the particular applicant meets the requirements or criteria established, the agency must award that applicant a grant. An eligible grantee has a right to receive a grant, and the amount of the grant is also legally determined. Although these statutes are not compelled by constitutional provisions to follow any particular pattern, certain recognizable patterns have formed over the years that generally apply to these mandatory grants.

§ 5.03(a) State Plan Grants

In the mandatory grant program, the grantee is usually a state. The grantee is usually required to submit a "state plan" that meets statutory tests of eligibility. These grants are therefore commonly called "state plan" grants. There is of course some discretionary judgment for the grantor agency to determine whether the state plan meets the statutory requirements, but these requirements are generally stated in fairly sharp terms. The area of discretion is thus narrow, and it is narrowed further by traditional practice. In practice, if the grantor and grantee disagree, there is likely to be a negotiated resolution. If the dispute is not resolved by negotiation, there is generally a provision for administrative or judicial determination. The discretion that exists is seldom used to refuse a grant, but it is sometimes used to negotiate details.

When the state plan is approved, it controls the grant, and any change in the plan ordinarily should be made by an amendment that goes through substantially the same process as the original state plan.

⁷See § 2.04(a), supra, Chapter 6, "A Sample Mandatory Grant Program — Medicaid," and Chapter 7, "Mandatory Grants — The Thorn Court Case."

The amount of a mandatory grant is generally fixed by a "formula." For that reason these grants are often called "mandatory state plan formula" grants.

§ 5.03(b) Requirements for the State Plan

The requirements for the state plan are generally quite lengthy and complex. They typically require the benefits of the grant to be passed on to the state's residents in an evenhanded way. Various standards of this evenhandedness are spelled out in detail including often some degree of procedural protection for the intended indirect beneficiaries. The formulas for the grant payments take into account relevant factors, such as economic, social, and demographic data. They may have such variables as the population of the state, or the juvenile population, or the population residing in certain kinds of institutions. Grants for weatherization may have as parameters the number of "degree days" in an average year and the number of single family homes and their average square footage or cubic footage. The formula for Medicaid grants to the states under Title XIX of the Social Security Act fills more than a dozen pages of printing in the United States Code.⁴

Often, the state has been required to administer the grant through a single state agency, but this requirement may be waivable.⁵

§ 5.03(c) Formula Provisions

The amount of funds available is also typically set by a rather complex formula. A definition of formula grants given by the General Accounting Office reads: "Formula grants are grants in which a structured mathematical statement and data elements, such as statistical data, are used to (1) allocate funds to eligible recipients, or (2) determine a potential grant recipient's eligibility to receive funds, or both."⁶ For example, the amount may run to approxi-imately one-half to two-thirds of the total amount spent by the state for the grant purposes, but may include 100 percent reimbursement of certain expenditures, 90 percent of other expenditures, and 50 percent of others. The definition of expenditures that may be counted towards determining the federal share is also typically quite complex.

§ 5.03(d) Common Assurances for Mandatory Grants

An assurance that the federal government will not interfere in certain areas is frequently present. The areas typically protected are education, medicine, and police.⁷ Similar assurances are sometimes found in discretionary grant statutes as well.

§ 5.03(e) Flow-Through of Benefits

Although the state may be the grantee, the underlying purpose of the grant is typically to assist local governments through sub-awards by the state, or to assist the state's residents. Because of this, and perhaps, in part, because of some confusion of ideas, the ultimate intended beneficiary may be recognized as having rights, which the courts often approach in terms of constitutional doctrine.⁸

§ 5.04 CATEGORICAL GRANTS AND BLOCK GRANTS

There are grants that are classified as "categorical" grants, which can be contrasted with those classified as "block" grants.⁹

Grant programs that typically deal with assistance for fairly limited and specific purposes are often called "categorical" grants. Discretionary grants that may be for fairly limited purposes are also considered to be categorical.

In contrast, "block" grants are grants that are made to provide assistance within broad limits rather than for narrowly defined purposes. They authorize a broader range of activities. They are not categorical, since they deliberately leave the state a range of

Cross-Cutting Conditions

§ 11.01 DIFFERENCES AMONG GRANT CONDITIONS

A grant is normally accompanied by conditions. A major distinction among grant conditions is in the degree of generality. There are government-wide conditions, which apply nearly universally to all grant programs of all agencies. These are sometimes called "cross-cutting" conditions.¹ There are agency-wide conditions, sometimes called "general" conditions, which apply broadly to all grants of a certain type issued by a particular agency. There are program conditions, which are generally applicable to all grants under a particular grant program — these are most conveniently discussed along with agency-wide conditions. And there are special conditions, which are more or less tailored to problems perceived in a particular grant project. These different types of conditions will be discussed in turn.

§ 11.02 GOVERNMENT-WIDE CONDITIONS

Government-wide, or cross-cutting conditions, are largely imposed directly by statute. Some are imposed by Executive Order. A few are imposed by OMB circulars pursuant to statute. Others are imposed pursuant to OMB recommendation or other Executive Department policy advice, without statutory requirement.

The cross-cutting requirements are of two principal types:
a) socio-economic policy requirements — such as prohibition of

But Congress also hears another voice from the public, and most of them say cut our taxes, cut our expenditures, let us get sensible about this thing so that we will have a little to live on and save a little for our children to go to school and retirement and so on. So Congress is listening, but they are listening to different parts, perhaps, of the people's cry.

Mr. REED. We are well familiar with this, Mr. Chairman.

I think you will agree with me that the criminal justice system and especially the prisons and jails, constitute a stronghold for our society. Now, there are those who would breach that stronghold. There are those who for their own reasons would eliminate prisons, would denigrate the activities that go on in jails and prisons. I propose to you, Mr. Chairman, that if this stronghold is breached, we will no longer have a society. And whatever the cost is, within reason, we must some way or other provide the reasonable resources for sustaining that stronghold in conformity with our constitutional and our good American expectations.

Senator HRUSKA. Well, it is associations like your which could do much to stir public thought and also, hopefully, some action along these lines that you have described so well.

Mr. REED. We are trying, sir.

Senator HRUSKA. So give the greetings of the subcommittee to your associates in that association. Tell them to be of good cheer. We are going to do the best we can.

Mr. REED. Thank you, sir.

Senator HRUSKA. And thanks for your help.

Our final witness for the day is Richard W. Velde who is Administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Mr. Velde, some time ago you appeared here and gave us the opening scenario of these hearings. Since then we have had many witnesses and many points of view expressed in this forum. I know you have followed those hearings and the testimony very carefully and methodically, and the size and the scope of your 26-page statement indicates as much.

I know it would be helpful—the statement is long, and yet, in having read it last night and early this morning I suggest it would be a good reference work to those who have any specific ideas or criticisms to voice; because for every action there is a reaction, and we know that. We had some in the last 2 minutes.

We have had a subject that is dear to your heart—namely, the idea that there are so many guidelines that they are oppressive and frustrating and burdensome, and they never cease to come. I know you will in due time address yourself to that.

We welcome you here once again, and we will print in the record this statement that you have submitted in its entirety.

You may now proceed in your own fashion, to highlight it or skip-read it, as you choose.

[The material referred to follows:]

ADDITIONAL STATEMENT OF RICHARD W. VELDE, ADMINISTRATOR, LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION, CONCERNING LEGISLATION WHICH WOULD AMEND THE OMNIBUS CRIME CONTROL AND SAFE STREETS ACT OF 1968

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate your invitation to again appear before the Subcommittee on Criminal Laws and Procedures in my capacity as Adminis-

Section 301(d) provides that not more than one-third of any Part C grant awarded to a state may be expended for compensation of police and other regular law enforcement and criminal justice personnel. The one-third salary provision was included in the Safe Streets Act because the Congress was concerned that responsibility for law enforcement not be shifted from state and local governments to the Federal Government. In addition, federal funds might supplant state and local efforts, instead of supplementing them.

In a few instances, remarks have been directed to the Subcommittee to the effect that there is excessive "red tape" involved in the administration of the LEAA grant program. While in some cases, regrettable and unforeseen difficulties have arisen and caused delay to certain applicants, I believe the Subcommittee will find that overall the program has been administered effectively and efficiently.

Prior testimony before the Subcommittee made reference to 1,200 pages of guidelines issued by LEAA to implement a 23 page Act. Such statements can be very misleading. LEAA has implemented the statute in a manner consistent with the intent of Congress in establishing the block grant program. Much of the material contained in guideline manuals is informational. Included are such items as reprints of the statute, OMB circulars, standard application forms, reporting forms, fund allocation tables, and address lists. All this material is provided for the convenience of the user, not to impose additional burdens on applicants, as one might be led to believe.

An example of the manuals issued by LEAA is the most recent edition of the "Guide for Discretionary Grant Programs." This manual, which is LEAA's largest program guideline document, has 224 pages of requirements and specifications. However, the specifications are for numerous different categories of programs. Any particular applicant would need only refer to the two or three pages under which funds were being sought, and a few pages of general requirements. In addition to the guideline requirements, the manual contains 15 informational appendices.

It should be noted that some of the information provided in LEAA guideline manuals relate not to requirements arising out of LEAA's legislation, but to other federal statutes which have been passed to deal with crucial issues of national concern. Examples of such statutes which may be considered by some critics to be LEAA "red tape," but over which we have no control, are the National Environmental Policy Act, the Clean Air Act, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, the National Historic Preservation Act, the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Act, and the Safe Drinking Water Act. Thus, it is unfair to single out LEAA as the cause for many requirements being imposed on those seeking assistance.

As you know, Mr. Chairman, provisions have been added to LEAA's enabling legislation which help assure swift action. By law, LEAA must approve or disapprove state comprehensive plans within ninety days of submission. State planning agencies must act on subgrant applications within ninety days of their receipt. LEAA has adopted a similar ninety day rule for consideration of any discretionary grant applications. I might add, Mr. Chairman, that there have been well over 100,000 grants made during the course of the LEAA program, with the number of applicants far exceeding that figure.

With regard to the application forms themselves, LEAA uses the standard forms for federal grant programs, prescribed by the Office of Management and Budget, in its discretionary grant program. This assures uniformity for all such applicants.

To clarify provisions of LEAA's enabling legislation and provide guidance on application, award, and grant administration procedures, a number of guideline manuals have been issued. Program manuals give information on programs and projects for which funds are available and guidance to prospective grantees about the steps to be taken in making application for funds. The manuals also give guidance to grantees on their responsibilities of applicable federal laws and regulations. Additionally specified are monitoring and evaluation policies and procedures.

Guideline manuals have also been issued to provide direction regarding specific issues concerning which grantees often require assistance. Examples are our audit guide, financial guide, and equal opportunity guidelines. Without the detailed information provided in these manuals by LEAA, many problems could arise for grantees which could only otherwise be resolved on a case-by-case basis, a very time consuming proposition.

Finally in this regard, Mr. Chairman, it should be pointed out that the LEAA program is essentially one administered by the states and by local governments. These jurisdictions all may have requirements which affect the management of the program, perhaps causing delay to applicants for funds. If inefficient management techniques are the cause of problems, LEAA may be able to provide the technical assistance necessary to upgrade capabilities and initiate effective techniques. In fact, we have taken such action in several instances. However, it would be inappropriate for LEAA to otherwise dictate to these jurisdictions the nature of their administrative procedures.

Representatives of state court systems appearing before the Subcommittee have taken issue with LEAA's estimate of the percentage of funds which goes for court programs. You will recall, Mr. Chairman, that we have indicated that courts projects receive in the neighborhood of 16 percent of LEAA program funds. Others, however, have voiced the opinion that the actual courts funding level is 6 or 7 percent, and have been critical of the fact that LEAA includes in the total such items as defense and prosecution projects.

It is extremely difficult to credit LEAA funds to exclusive program categories such as police, courts, or corrections. This is particularly true since as much as 40 percent of LEAA grants benefit multiple components of the criminal justice system. Criminal justice training academies receiving LEAA support are one example of this multi-component thrust. One week, courses may be given to prosecutors, one week to police officers, one week to probationary officers, and another week to judicial representatives.

Another example is the funding provided to support criminal history information systems. Such systems are used by nearly all elements of the criminal justice system, including police, the courts, and correctional agencies. There is no accurate way to assign a specific amount of these dollars to particular program categories.

Another difficulty in this regard is one of definition. There is a bona fide difference of opinion as to what actually is a court program. Certain projects to assist prosecution, defense, and probation functions have been characterized by LEAA as courts projects. Advocates of increased funding for the courts feel, however, that only those projects which directly benefit court operations be included in the definition, with other efforts being listed separately, perhaps as a new category.

LEAA is now attempting to resolve these differences and provide a discrete apportionment of all funding for courts projects under definitions acceptable to all interested parties. A special task force of judicial leaders and technicians has been commissioned to develop acceptable working definitions for categorizing projects, apply these definitions to LEAA project expenditure data, and determine the percentage of LEAA funds devoted to courts projects.

The last issues I would like to address are criticisms of the LEAA program which trouble me deeply. I am troubled not only because the criticisms are felt to be inappropriate and unwarranted, but because of the manner in which they were presented to the Subcommittee. Certain of the comments supporting the criticisms were misleading and incomplete, while other statements would clearly be shown not supported by the facts if careful investigation were undertaken. It is my hope that the Subcommittee, for the reasons I will discuss, will not be misled in its deliberations with respect to the LEAA program as a result of this testimony.

One issue which was raised in the testimony concerned certain aspects of LEAA's civil rights compliance effort. Because the organization which the witness represents is, and was at the time of the prior testimony, engaged in litigation with LEAA on these very matters, it would be highly inappropriate for me to discuss the substance of those particular remarks in this forum. LEAA is now preparing its response to the allegations involved in the litigation and will be most happy to provide the Subcommittee with a copy when formally submitted to the court. Needless to say, LEAA believes it is very effectively enforcing its civil rights responsibility, and it is felt that the results of litigation will clearly establish this fact.

LEAA's role in the development of information systems and the impact of such systems upon individual privacy was also called into question by this same witness. For the full information of the Subcommittee, I would like to briefly describe LEAA's involvement in the area of criminal justice information systems.

INTRODUCTION

1. PURPOSE. The purpose of this manual is to provide information about major categorical programs of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, authorized by the Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended, and the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, as amended. The manual includes information about discretionary grant programs, selected program field tests, technical assistance, and training. Information about how to apply for assistance and who to contact for additional information is also provided.

This manual is complemented by additional guidelines and program announcements and plans, such as the Program Plan of the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, the Program Plan for Statistics of the National Criminal Justice Information and Statistics Service, program guidelines of the Office of Criminal Justice Education and Training, and program announcements and other documents regarding Incentive Programs. In addition, supplements to this manual will be published as new programs, such as those of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, are developed.

2. SCOPE. This manual is of interest to State and local criminal justice agencies, institutions and organizations who work with criminal justice agencies, State Planning Agencies, regional and local planning units, and LEAA personnel.
3. CANCELLATION. LEAA Guideline Manual M 4500.1F, December 21, 1977, same subject, is herewith cancelled.
4. INTRODUCTION. Many of the programs in this manual reflect the implementation of the Action Program Development Process in LEAA during the past year. The Action Program Development Process is an effort to improve the value and effectiveness of LEAA action programs by systematically building on knowledge about concepts, approaches, and techniques which are successful in controlling crime and improving criminal justice, carefully testing program concepts, demonstrating programs which are successful, and marketing concepts through training and technical assistance.

Programs which are currently in the stages of program design and testing as well as demonstration, are included in this manual. Major technical assistance and training programs which serve to market program concepts and techniques are also included.

LEAA programs will increasingly be developed through the Action Program Development Process.

APPENDIX 1. GENERAL SPECIFICATIONS AND REQUIREMENTS FOR
DISCRETIONARY GRANTS

1. SCOPE. This appendix contains general requirements for and limits on use of discretionary funds grants, including eligibility rules, general requirements, prohibitions and restrictions, and other technical requirements.

SECTION 1. ELIGIBLE PROJECTS AND APPLICANTS

2. ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.

- a. Applications will normally be considered only if they fall within the scope and coverage of programs described in Chapters 1 through 6 of this Manual.
- b. Applicants seeking categorical funds for projects which do not fall within the scope and coverage of programs described in this Manual should submit a brief pre-application or concept paper describing the objectives, strategies, and resources required for the proposed project, before submitting a formal application.
- c. Applicants are advised that categorical funds for projects not covered by this Manual or by the Program Plan of the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice are extremely limited.

3. ELIGIBLE APPLICANTS.

- a. Discretionary grants authorized under Part C (Grants for Law Enforcement Purposes) and Part E (Grants for Correctional Purposes) of the Crime Control and Safe Streets Act can be made only to:
 - (1) State Planning Agencies;
 - (2) Local units of government;
 - (3) Combinations of local units of government; or
 - (4) Non-profit organizations.
- b. Grants may be made to State agencies as co-applicants with or subgrantees of State Planning Agencies.

M 4500.1G
September 30, 1978

- c. Special emphasis grants authorized under Section 224 of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Act (Grants for Juvenile Delinquency Prevention and Treatment Programs) can be made to public and private agencies, organizations and institutions. Private non-profit agencies, organizations or institutions must have had experience in dealing with youth.
- (1) A private non-profit agency, organization or institution is defined as any corporation, foundation, trust, association, cooperative, accredited institution of higher education, and any other agency, organization or institution which is operated primarily for scientific, educational, service, charitable, or similar public purposes, but which is not under public supervision or control, and no part of the net earnings of which inures or may lawfully inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and which has been held by IRS to be tax-exempt under the provisions of Section 501(c) (3) of the 1954 Internal Revenue Code.
 - (2) (a) Experience in dealing with youth means that the non-profit agency, organization or institution has been in existence for at least two years and has established program services for youth related to the program or project for which funding is sought;
(b) Under special circumstances the two year requirement may be waived by the Administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention.
- d. Programs contemplating action by a particular type of law enforcement agency, or efforts conducted for State and local government by a university or other private agency, must have the application submitted by either:
- (1) The department of state government under whose jurisdiction the project will be conducted; or
 - (2) A unit of general local government, or combination of such units, whose law enforcement agencies, systems, or activities will execute or be benefited by the grant.

SECTION 2. GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

4. GRANTEE MATCHING CONTRIBUTION. Applicants for grants authorized under Parts C and E of the Crime Control Act (except Indian Tribes, the Trust Territories, Guam, American Samoa and the Marianas) must provide at least 10 percent of the total project costs. For some programs a larger matching contribution is required for second and subsequent years of award.
 - a. Matching contributions must be in cash rather than in-kind goods and services.
 - b. Matching contributions may be funds from State, local or private sources but may not include other Federal funds except where the Federal statute governing the other funds authorizes those funds to be used to match other Federal grants, e.g.:
 - (1) Funds provided by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974;
 - (2) Funds provided by the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965; and
 - (3) Funds provided by the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972, as amended (General Revenue Sharing Funds).
 - c. Projects funded under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, as amended, do not require matching funds, unless otherwise designated in the program description
 - d. Community Anti-Crime Program projects (Chapter 1, Paragraph 2) do not require matching funds.
 - e. For more detailed information regarding grantee matching contribution see the effective edition of LEAA M 7100.1.
5. ASSUMPTION OF COSTS. It is LEAA policy that funds are awarded for initial development and demonstration and not for long term support.
 - a. Projects will not be funded for a total of more than three years without specific justification and approval at the initial award by the Administrator of LEAA.
 - b. Applicants must indicate as part of the initial application how project activities will be paid for when Federal funding ceases and what plans will be made during the period of Federal funding to arrange for that funding. This information will be used as one criterion for evaluating applications for funding.

App 1 Par 4

M 4500.10
September 30, 1978

- c. It is LEAA policy to encourage increasing grantee matching contribution for second and third years of award.
 - d. Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act funded programs may be continued for longer periods consistent with LEAA Financial Guideline M 7100.1A, Change 3, Chapter 7, Paragraph 12.
 - e. See individual program descriptions (Chapters 1 through 6) for any special requirements or exemptions with respect to assumption of costs.
6. PERIOD OF SUPPORT.
- a. Projects will normally be awarded funds for a twelve month period.
 - b. Awards for longer periods, not to exceed eighteen months, may be made subject to grantee and LEAA needs.
 - c. Projects exceeding eighteen months require separate applications for specific periods of eighteen months or less.
 - d. Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act funded programs may be supported for longer periods of time, consistent with LEAA Financial Guideline M 7100.1A, Change 3, Chapter 7, Paragraph 12.
 - e. Exceptions to funding period limitations, where applicable, are noted in program descriptions (Chapters 1 through 6).
7. GRANT ASSURANCES. The grant assurances contained in Part V of SF 424, Application for Federal Assistance (Appendix 6) are incorporated in and made a part of all discretionary grant awards.
- a. All grant assurances should be reviewed carefully because they define the obligations of grantees and their subgrantees and express commitments that have binding contractual effect when the award is accepted by the grantee.
 - b. Special Conditions. Frequently, LEAA will approve or require, as a condition of grant award and receipt of funds, "special conditions" applicable only to the particular project or type of program receiving grant support. These special conditions are to be negotiated and included in the terms of an award. Notice and opportunity for discussion will be provided to grant applicants. Special conditions may:

M 4500.1G
September 30, 1978

- (1) Set forth specific grant administration policies;
 - (2) Set forth LEAA regulations (e.g., written approval of changes);
 - (3) Seek additional project information or detail;
 - (4) Establish special reporting requirements; and/or
 - (5) Provide for LEAA approval of critical project elements such as key staff, evaluation designs, dissemination of manuscripts, contracts, etc.
- c. All grants are subject to applicable other LEAA guidelines and regulations. Copies of these and other grant condition references may be obtained from LEAA. Major other guidelines and regulations are:
- (1) M 7100.1, Financial Management for Planning and Action Grants, which is the basic fiscal administration manual for LEAA grants;
 - (2) LEAA regulations implementing the provisions of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 with respect to LEAA grants (28 CFR 42.101, et. seq., Subpart C);
 - (3) LEAA Nondiscrimination in Federally Assisted Crime Control and Juvenile Delinquency Program (28 C.F.R. 42. 201, et. seq., subpart D) and equal employment opportunity program guidelines (28 C.F.R. 42.301 et. seq., subpart E) with respect to LEAA grants;
 - (4) Department of Justice-LEAA regulations on privacy and security of criminal history information systems (28 C.F.R. Part 20);
 - (5) Department of Justice-LEAA regulations on the Confidentiality of Identifiable Research and Statistical Information (28 C.F.R. Part 22).
- d. The following condition applies to all grants awarded by LEAA:

"THIS GRANT, OR PORTION THEREOF, IS CONDITIONAL UPON SUBSEQUENT CONGRESSIONAL OR EXECUTIVE ACTION WHICH MAY RESULT FROM FEDERAL BUDGET DEFERRAL OR RECISION ACTIONS PURSUANT TO THE AUTHORITY CONTAINED IN SECTIONS 1012(A) AND 1013(A) OF THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET AND IMPOUNDMENT CONTROL ACT OF 1974, 31 U.S.C. 1301, PUBLIC LAW 93-344, 88 STAT. 297 (JULY 12, 1974)."

Evidence of reasonable use of alternatives to incarceration, including but not limited to referral and bail practices, diversionary procedures, court sentencing practices, comprehensive probation resources and the minimization of incarceration by State and local parole practices, work-study release or other programs assuring timely release of prisoners under adequate supervision. M 4500.1G
September 30, 1978

1. Certification that special administrative requirements dealing with objectives, architectural and cost data, contractual arrangements, etc., will be made applicable to contractors.
 1. All Applications for Part E funds for purposes of construction or renovation of juvenile and adult correctional institutions or facilities MUST BE submitted in accordance with Guideline G 4063.2 (effective edition) to the national contractor to be selected by LEAA for clearance of the architectural plans, designs and construction drawings. Applications should be forwarded to the contractor at the same time they are submitted to the State Planning Agency and to LEAA. In turn, the contractor will respond to the applicant, the State Planning Agency and LEAA.
9. SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS FOR CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.
- a. Construction grants under Part C are intended to be supportive of and supplemental to programs aimed at crime reduction and criminal justice system improvement. Construction grants under Part E are intended to meet the need for improved correctional facilities, with prime emphasis on community-based correctional facilities, and must be an integral part of a comprehensive plan for correctional programs and facilities.
 - b. New construction projects will be considered for funding only when they represent the only method available to meet program goals of LEAA national programs or of State comprehensive plans.
 - c. Construction projects will be funded only when they meet critical needs, are innovative, and when they involve approaches which are replicable to other jurisdictions:
 - (1) An innovative approach to construction involves special attention to the needs of citizens who come in contact with the criminal justice system, special attention to possible multi-jurisdictional, regional, or multi-purpose use of the facility, among other elements.
 - (2) To be replicable, projects must show how requirements for the facility were developed, how the facility supported the goals, objectives, and priorities of LEAA national programs or State comprehensive plans, and how considerations of program objectives were built into the design of the facility.

September 30, 1977

- d. Applicants must comply with LEAA Guidelines, G 7400.1B, Equal Employment Opportunity Procedure for Submitting Information on Construction and Renovation Contracts and with Executive Orders 11246 and 11375.
 - e. In accordance with the provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Pub. L. 93-112, 29 U.S.C. §792, et seq., any building construction funded under the Act for which there is an intended use that will require that such building or facility be accessible to the public or may result in the employment or residence therein of physically handicapped persons must be so constructed as to assure that physically handicapped persons will have ready access to, and use of, such buildings.
 - f. Construction programs and projects funded under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act are limited to construction of innovative community based facilities for less than 20 people. Facilities include both buildings, and parts or sections of a building to be used for a particular program or project.
 - (1) Erection of new buildings is not permitted with Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention funds.
 - (2) Federal funds may not be used for more than 50 percent of the cost of construction of a facility developed pursuant to Section 227 of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act.
 - g. Application for construction projects must be made on Standard Form 424 with LEAA Form 4000/4 (Application for Federal Assistance Construction Program) attached.
 - h. Preapplications must be submitted for construction grants exceeding $100,000 in Federal funds.
 - i. For more information on definitions and requirements with respect to construction programs, see the effective edition of M 7100.1.
10. SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS FOR GRANTS INVOLVING AUTOMATED DATA PROCESSING (ADP)
In addition to the conditions set forth in this manual which apply to all grants, grantees receiving funds for automated data processing (ADP) must agree:
- a. To use, to the maximum extent practicable, computer software already produced and available without obligation.

M 4500.1G
September 30, 1978

- b. That all application programs will be written in Federal Standard COBOL or ANS FORTRAN (where the nature of the task requires a scientific programming language) whenever possible. Programs may be written in ANS BASIC for microcomputers and minicomputers subject to the following conditions: grantees will require hardware vendor assurance that the BASIC language facility (including any extensions or additions to the instruction set of ANS BASIC) will be validated by the National Bureau of Standards validation routine; extensions to the ANS BASIC instruction will be limited to those instructions agreed upon by mutual agreement after consultation with at least three hardware manufacturers; program applications, whether new or transferred, will run on the hardware of at least three manufacturers.
 - c. That grant funds will not be used for lease, maintenance, or engineering costs of proprietary applications software packages without specific, prior approval of LEAA.
 - d. That all computer software written under the grant will be made available to LEAA for transfer to authorized users in the criminal justice community without cost other than that directly associated with the transfer and that the system will be documented in sufficient detail to enable a competent data processing staff to adapt the system, or portions thereof, to usage on a computer of similar size and configuration, of any manufacturer.
 - e. To provide a complete copy of documentation, upon request, to the Systems Development Division, National Criminal Justice Information and Statistics Service, LEAA. Documentation will include, but not be limited to, Systems description, Operating Instructions, User Instructions, Program Maintenance Instructions, input forms, file descriptions, report formats, program listings, and flow charts for the system and programs. Grantee agrees to produce system documentation for this grant in accordance with Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS PUB 38).
 - f. To incorporate the provisions of all applicable conditions of the grant into all requests for proposal (RFP), requests for quotation (RFQ), information for bid (IFB), and contracts utilizing funds from the grant in order that contractors concerned will be guided by the LEAA requirements.
 - g. That conversion cost in itself will not be used to justify sole source procurement of ADP equipment.
11. SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS FOR MULTI-STATE OR MULTI-UNITS PROJECTS. Several discretionary programs encourage multi-State, regional, or cooperative projects involving multiple units of State or local government.
- a. Unless otherwise indicated in the specifications for a particular program, applications may be made by:

App 1 Para 10

M 4500.1G
September 30, 1978

- (1) One government unit in the group on behalf of the others;
 - (2) All units in the group jointly; or
 - (3) A special combination, association or joint venture created by a group of governmental units for general or grant application purposes.
- b. In all cases, clear evidence will be required of approval by all participating units of government with respect to:
- (1) Their participation in the project; and
 - (2) The terms and commitments of the grant proposal or application.
12. SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS OF OTHER FEDERAL LEGISLATION AND REGULATIONS.
LEAA is required to insure that all discretionary grants meet certain administrative and legal requirements imposed by other laws and administrative issuances. Therefore, the applicant must insure that the following requirements are met:
- a. Clean Air Act Violations. In accordance with the provisions of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 1857) as amended by Public Law 91-604, the Federal Water Pollution Act (33 U.S.C. 1251 et seq.) as amended by Public Law 92-500 and Executive Order 11738, grants, subgrants or contracts cannot be entered into, reviewed or extended with parties convicted of offenses under these laws.
 - b. Relocation Provisions. In accordance with the provisions of the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970, P.L. 91-646, 84 Stat. 1894, and the regulations of the Department of Justice (effective edition of LEAA Guideline G 4061.1, Relocation Assistance and Payments):
 - (1) The applicant and State Planning Agency shall assure that any program under which LEAA financial assistance is to be used to pay all or part of the cost of any program or project which results in displacement of any individual family, business and/or farm shall provide that:
 - (a) Within a reasonable period of time prior to displacement comparable decent, safe, and sanitary replacement dwellings will be available to displaced persons in accordance with such regulations as issued by the Attorney General;

M 4500.1G
September 30, 1978

- (b) Fair and reasonable relocation payments and assistance shall be provided to or for displaced persons as are required in such regulations as are issued by the Attorney General;
 - (c) Relocation or assistance programs shall be provided for such persons in accordance with such regulations issued by the Attorney General;
 - (d) The affected persons will be adequately informed of the available benefits and policies and procedures relating to the payment of monetary benefits; and
- (2) Such assurances shall be accompanied by an analysis of the relocation problems involved and a specific plan to resolve such problems.

c. Environmental Impact.

- (1) The National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 established environmental review procedures to determine if a proposed LEAA funded program or project is a "major Federal action significantly affecting the human environment." Each proposed action listed below must include an environmental evaluation.
- (a) New construction.
 - (b) The renovation or modification of a facility which leads to an increased occupancy of more than 25 persons.
 - (c) The implementation of programs involving the use of pesticides and other harmful chemicals.
 - (d) The implementation of programs involving harmful radiation (x-rays, etc.).
 - (e) Research and technology whose anticipated or intended future application could be expected to have a potential effect on the environment.
 - (f) Other actions determined by LEAA to possibly have a significant effect on the quality of the environment.

M 4500.1G

September 30, 1978

- (2) A determination shall thereafter be made by the responsible Federal official as to whether the action will have a significant effect on the environment requiring the preparation of an environmental analysis (a draft environmental impact statement) or whether a negative declaration can be filed.
 - (3) An environmental evaluation is a report of the environmental effects of the proposal and should consist of questions and narrative answers as well as supporting documentation that substantiates conclusions.
 - (4) An environmental analysis must be submitted with the original application in cases where the proposed action would significantly affect the environment. It will be utilized in the preparation of a draft environmental impact statement.
 - (5) A negative declaration will be filed by LEAA if the environmental evaluation does not indicate a significant environmental impact.
 - (6) Environmental Analysis Impact and Negative Declaration forms are available from Grants and Contracts Management Division, Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, 633 Indiana Avenue, Washington, D.C. 20531.
- d. Historic Sites. Before approving grants involving construction, renovation, purchasing or leasing of facilities LEAA shall consult with the State Liaison Officer for Historic Preservation to determine if the undertaking may have an effect on properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places. If the undertakings may have an effect on the listed properties, LEAA shall notify the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation.
- e. A-95 Notification Procedures. Applicants must notify appropriate areawide and State Clearinghouses of their intent to apply for Discretionary Grants, in accordance with LEAA's A-95 requirements (28CFR Part 30).
- f. Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973, Pub. L. 93-234, 42 U.S.C. §4001, et seq. LEAA will not approve any financial assistance for construction purposes in any area that has been identified by the Secretary of HUD as an area having special flood hazards and the community in the hazardous area is then participating in the National Flood Insurance Program.
- g. Rehabilitation. In accordance with the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (P.L. 93-112), no otherwise qualified handicapped individual in the United States, as defined in Section 7(6) of that Act, shall, solely by reason of his handicap, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.

September 30, 1978

- h. Safe Drinking Water Act, Pub. L. 93-523, 42 U.S.C. §300f, et seq. If the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency determines that an area has an aquifer (a water-bearing stratum of permeable rock, sand or gravel) which is the sole or principal source of drinking water for an area, and which if contaminated would create a significant hazard to public health, he shall publish notice of that determination in the Federal Register. After publication of such notice, no commitment of Federal financial assistance (through a grant, contract, loan or otherwise) may be entered into for any project which the EPA Administrator determines may contaminate such an aquifer. Any prospective subgrantee of Parts C and E funds shall assure that the project will have no effect on an aquifer so designated by the EPA Administrator.
- i. Endangered Species Act of 1973, Pub. L. 93-205, 16 U.S.C. §1531, et seq. The Secretary of Interior shall publish in the Federal Register, and from time to time he may by regulations revise a list of species determined by him or the Secretary of Commerce to be endangered species and a list of all species determined by him or the Secretary of Commerce to be threatened species. Each list shall refer to the species contained therein by scientific and common name and shall specify with respect to each such specie over what portion of its range it is endangered or threatened. Any prospective recipient of LEAA funds shall certify in writing prior to a grant award that the proposed action will not jeopardize the continued existence of an endangered specie or a threatened specie or result in the destruction or modification of the habitat of such a specie.
- j. Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, Pub. L. 90-542, 16 U.S.C. §1271, et seq. LEAA must notify the Secretary of the Interior and, where National Forest lands are involved, the Secretary of Agriculture of any activities in progress, commenced or resumed which affect any of the rivers specified in the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act. Any prospective grantee or subgrantee of LEAA grant funds will certify in writing that LEAA will be notified if any of the designated rivers are or will be affected by any program or project.
- k. Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act, Pub. L. 85-624, 16 U.S.C. §661, et. seq. LEAA must notify the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of Interior and the head of the State administrative agency exercising administration over the wildlife resources of the State wherever the waters of any stream or other body of water are proposed to be diverted or controlled by LEAA, a grantee, or subgrantee. Any prospective recipient of LEAA grant funds will certify that LEAA will be notified if any of the actions specified in 16 U.S.C. §662(a) are anticipated.

- l. Historical and Archeological Preservation Act, Pub. L. 93-291, 16 U.S.C. §469, et seq. Any prospective recipient of LEAA funds shall notify LEAA if the funded activity may cause irreparable loss or destruction to significant historical or archeological data. LEAA will then notify the Secretary of the Interior who shall conduct a survey and investigation of the area which may be affected and recover and preserve such data.
- m. Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972, Pub. L. 92-583, 16 U.S.C. §1451, et seq. Each LEAA-supported activity which directly affects the Coastal Zone shall be conducted in a manner, which to the maximum extent feasible, is consistent with the approved State management program for the protection of the Coastal Zone. the findings and recommendations were based on the most comprehensive review ever undertaken of the nature and causes of crime, of the performance and capability of the criminal justice system, and of the problems confronted by that system. Criticism was levelled not so much against the Commission's findings and conclusions as against its failure to offer concrete suggestions for meaningfully affecting crime in the near term.³⁴ This too would be addressed if not resolved in the debates surrounding passage of the Safe Streets Act in 1968.

Safe Streets: The Panoply of Conflicting Views

By 1967 reports of crime continued to paint an increasingly gloomy picture. Civil disorders of massive proportions engulfed several American cities during the summers of 1965, 1966, and 1967. Public ire and concern required a federal response greater than that made under provisions of the 1965 Law Enforcement Assistance Act. In response, President Johnson sent Congress a legislative message on crime (his third) that included a proposed bill entitled, "The Safe Streets and Crime Control Act of 1967." The President's message was delivered on February 6, 1967, and thirteen days later the President's Commission issued its long awaited report. The timing of the two events was not accidental, and the title of the President's bill was calculated to elicit maximum positive political response.

The Safe Streets Bill recognized the primacy of state and local police powers, all of its provisions were aimed at assisting the states in performing their functions rather than at taking over those functions or unduly interfering in the performance of them. Specific provisions included proposals of assistance to modernize equipment, to reorganize law enforcement agencies, to recruit and train law enforcement officers, to modernize the court system, to develop more effective rehabilitation techniques, and to set up effective crime-prevention programs. Even though several portions of the bill offered assistance to corrections and the courts, there was an apparently widespread assumption held in Congress as well as by the public that the assistance was primarily, if not exclusively, aimed toward law enforcement. Both the President's proposed legislation and the subsequent report of his Commission gave forthright recognition to the concept of a criminal justice system—an interrelated and interdependent group of "crime-fighting" agencies.

Yet, during debate and passage of the legislation there was little to indicate that this concept received marked recognition or treatment.

The President's Safe Streets proposals were closely fashioned after the approach undertaken in the 1965 Law Enforcement Assistance Act. The grants would fund innovation and improvement in a variety of categories. Grant administration would be federally controlled under the Attorney General. There was much more money involved in the 1967 proposals, but the intent of grants-in-aid, as in the 1965 legislation, would be to make direct "categorical" grants. Cities with a population of fifty thousand or more (following the course laid out by other great society funding ventures) would be eligible for action funds, but funding levels proposed were far smaller than those proposed for other great-society program efforts such as OEO.³⁵ This may have been a conscious effort to shield the crime proposals from the type of criticism then being levelled by Congress against OEO—namely, that OEO had gone in too fast with too much and had produced massive waste because the infrastructure was not available to manage the funds effectively.³⁶

Although the President's funding and program proposals were limited to innovation and improvement that were likely to have a significant effect on the crime problem only in the long run, the public and Congress were for quicker fixes. Part of this disparity can be traced to President Johnson himself: in 1965 he charged his Crime Commission to find the ways not only to reduce crime but to "banish" it.³⁷ Later attempts by the President to retreat from this excessive goal were too late—the public was fixed on the notion of quickly minimizing if not eliminating crime. The President's Commission in its final report did not help in setting expectations straight: at one point it asserted, "America can control crime."³⁸ The Commission noted that it would not be achieved quickly or easily, but few heard that. Among other factors involved, the nation was moving through a period of unbridled faith in the power of money and especially in the power of federal expenditures to solve problems.

Chapter 2 will treat the legislative debates and final features of the Safe Streets Act in greater detail. However, there are aspects to that debate and to the changes subsequently made to the President's proposal that reflect the several competing social and political forces discussed above. Clearly, the state's prerogatives in exercising the police power were hotly at issue. So, too, the get-tough preferences of conservatives, largely ignored in President Johnson's legislative proposals,

Chapter 2 LAWS AND REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE LEAA PROGRAM

Thomas J. Madden

In the 1960s, Congress began to use the constitutional spending power to exert substantial policy controls over state and local functions and to create a host of new grant programs. In 1962, there were only 160 federal grant programs authorized by the Congress.¹ By January of 1967, when Congress prepared to take up the debate on the Safe Streets Act, the number of intergovernmental grant programs had grown to 379 with some 109 new grant programs being enacted in 1965 alone.² Federal assistance in dollar terms more than doubled between 1963 and 1967, rising from 7.7 percent to 11 percent of all federal budget outlays and from 1.5 percent to 2.2 percent of the gross national product.³

By 1967, it was also clear that the new programs and laws controlling the expenditure of the new grants⁴ had substantially altered the relationships between state, local, and federal government relationships without establishing an essential rationale for assigning intergovernmental functions other than that of pragmatic politics.⁵

The Safe Streets Act followed the pattern leading to the creation of many of these new programs. The rise in crime in 1963 and 1964 was the subject of debate in the 1964 elections and it was addressed by President Johnson in a crime message in 1965 calling for a national response to the crime problem.⁶ This message was followed by Congressional enactment of a small criminal justice assistance program and the appointment of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice.⁷ The Commission documented the need for a major federal response to state and local crime problems, and Congress responded with the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act.

When Congress took up the debate on President Johnson's proposal in 1967 to create a major new criminal justice assistance program, it quickly became clear that there were two issues of overriding concern to the conservative members who were in a position to control the debate. The first was a concern that by vesting the Attorney General with the authority to provide grants to states, the Congress would also be giving the Attorney General the power to control state and local law enforcement agencies and would thereby be nationalizing state and local law enforcement functions. The second and related concern was that the Johnson proposal bypassed state government and allowed the Attorney General to deal directly with cities in making grants. In the view of then House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford, a "direct" federalism approach would enable the Attorney General to "arbitrarily" decide which local law enforcement agencies would receive funds and what these agencies could do with the funds.⁸

The Senate Judiciary Committee was the initial focus of much of the concern over the creation of the national police force. The minority report of the committee, for example, in commenting on the discretionary authority given to the Attorney General to make grants stated:

[W]e don't want the Attorney General, the so-called "Mr. Big" of Federal law enforcement to become the director of State and local law enforcement as well. It is true that the Attorney General is the chief law enforcement officer of the Federal government. But he is not chief law enforcement officer of States and cities. We believe America does not want him to serve in that capacity. . . . We don't want this bill to become the vehicle for the imposition of Federal guidelines, controls, and domination.⁹

The House of Representatives, which acted first on the Johnson proposal, had accepted the view that the states should have control over expenditures by local government.¹⁰ This view was rejected by the Senate Judiciary Committee¹¹ and the Senate floor became the forum for the key debate on this issue. The contest was between the supporters of direct federalism—large city mayors and their Congressional supporters—and the supporters of state control through so-called block grants—governors from the Midwest and the Western states and Republican senators and southern Democratic senators.

Amendments to convert the Senate Committee bill from a direct local aid program to a state block grant program were introduced by Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen. Senator Dirksen contended that gubernatorial supervision over state planning was necessary to avoid duplication or conflict between local and state crime reduction plans and programs. In the debate he stated that:

We are never going to do a job in this field until we have a captain at the top, in the form of the Governor, and those he appoints, to coordinate the matter for a State because crime may be committed in a spot, but before it gets through its ramifications, it may spread over a very considerable area.¹²

The view stated by Senator Dirksen had roots not only in the Senator's traditional concern for state interests but also in the 1967 report of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice, which recommended that:

In every State and every city, an agency, or one or more officials, should be specifically responsible for planning improvements in crime prevention and control and encouraging their implementation.¹³

The recommendation of the President's Crime Commission reflected a concern for system-wide planning. This meant at the very least ad hoc coordination among police, courts, and corrections agencies so that policies implemented in one part of the system would not have an adverse effect on other components.

The Dirksen amendments required each state to create a state criminal justice planning agency (SPA) and to develop an annual comprehensive plan. These amendments were intended, in part, to address the concerns of the President's Crime Commission. The amendments were also intended to assure that there was a coordinated intergovernmental approach to crime control in each state.

The block grant was also seen by its supporters as a way of minimizing substantive federal control over state and local law enforcement. In the Senate Judiciary Committee report on the Safe Streets Act, the supporters of block grants stated that the purpose of the block grant was "to insure that federal assistance to state and local law enforcement does not bring with it federal domination and control nor provide the machinery or potential for the establishment of a federal police force."¹⁴

The United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in 1971 had an opportunity to comment on this latter concern of the block grant proponents. In a law suit challenging the lack of controls exerted over block grant expenditures, the court stated:

"The dominant concern of Congress apparently was to guard against any tendency towards federalization of local police and

"Federal Aid to Criminal Justice"

law enforcement agencies. Such a result, it was felt, would be less efficient than allowing local law enforcement officials to coordinate their state's overall efforts to meet unique local problems and conditions. Even more important than Congress's search for efficiency and expertise was its fear that over-broad federal control of state law enforcement would result in the creation of an Orwellian "federal police force."¹⁵

The Senate passed the bill containing the Dirksen amendments by a 72 to 4 roll-call vote and final action on the legislation came on June 6, when the House accepted without change the Senate version.¹⁶ On June 19, 1968, President Johnson signed into law the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.¹⁷

A key assumption underlying the Safe Streets program was that, like many of the hundreds of new grant programs created by the Johnson Administration, "money makes a difference,"—that is, the more funds that are available, the greater the possibility of reducing crime.¹⁸

While the federal government had been extending nonfinancial criminal justice assistance to state and local governments at the operational level for several years prior to the enactment of the Safe Streets Act, the Act was the first major effort to provide financial assistance for state and local criminal justice efforts.¹⁹ The Safe Streets Act had three basic purposes:

- the stimulation of efforts to improve the effectiveness of state and local criminal justice agencies;
- the coordination of the activities of state and local criminal justice systems;
- the upgrading of the capabilities of state and local criminal justice agencies to deal with crime.²⁰

The Safe Streets Act also gave the federal government new powers to enforce control over the sale and possession of handguns.²¹ It made possession of firearms by convicted felons a federal crime.²² It also made unauthorized wiretapping a federal crime.²³

Title I of the Safe Streets Act which established the LEAA program, had the following major provisions:

Administration. A Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) was established within the Department of Justice. In doing so, Congress severely limited the authority of the Attorney

Laws and Regulations Governing the LEAA Program

General over LEAA by establishing LEAA within the Department of Justice under the "general authority of the Attorney General." In essence, this meant that LEAA was to be free of the day-to-day supervision of the Attorney General to operate as an independent agency. LEAA was subject to the Attorney General's control only when the Attorney General established policies of general applicability to the entire Justice Department. The Attorney General did have final authority to recommend to the President and the Office of Management and Budget the amount of funds that should be appropriated each year for the LEAA programs.

The LEAA was put under the direction of a "troika"—an administrator and two associate administrators, appointed by the President, and confirmed by the Senate. The "troika" had authority jointly to carry out, the functions, powers and duties of the LEAA.

Block Grants. Block grants were authorized under Part B of the Act to cover up to 90 percent of the total cost of the operation of state planning agencies (SPAs), which were to be created or designated by the governor of each state and were to develop annual comprehensive criminal justice plans. The SPA was to have a representative character including representatives of law enforcement and units of local government. Each state was to be allocated each year a flat amount of $100,000, with the remainder of planning funds to be distributed on a population basis. Forty percent of the planning grant funds were to be made available to local jurisdictions.

Under Part C of the Act, eighty-five percent of the so-called "action grant" funds were to be allocated to the states on a population basis as block grants, with seventy-five percent of the funds to be passed through to local governments. In order to receive a block action grant, the state had to submit a comprehensive plan that met certain requirements, including special emphasis on organized crime and civil disorder programs. The federal government was authorized to pay up to seventy-five percent of the total cost for organized-crime and riot-control projects, fifty percent for construction projects, and sixty percent for other action purposes. One significant limitation, added by those concerned about federal control of state and local law enforcement ditions not found in the Safe Streets Act itself. Support for this proposition is claimed in the language and the policy inherent in the Safe Streets Act.

Reliance in the present case is misplaced, for it is plain that the LEAA has overdrawn the 'hands off' policy of the Safe Streets Act. Properly read, neither the Act's language nor its policy prohibits or excuses compliance with NHPA and NEPA.⁴⁹

In 1975 there were 19 different "cross-cutting" laws which governed the expenditure of federal grants which, under the rationale of the ruling in Ely v. Velde, neither prohibited nor excused compliance with these statutes. (Appendix II.)

In 1973, LEAA had undergone another reorganization which divided the state and local grant program among several offices within LEAA. (See Figure 6.)

The Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974

By 1974, Congressional dissatisfaction with the low emphasis placed by LEAA on juvenile justice peaked. Congressional critics charged that LEAA's approach had been to see the juvenile offender in terms of crime and punishment. In their view, LEAA had not provided adequate funds for juvenile delinquency problems, particularly prevention, and had not succeeded in bringing about effective coordination of Federal juvenile delinquency programs.

Ultimately Congress passed the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 and established an Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention in LEAA to administer it. The Senate Judiciary Committee stated that the purpose of the Act was as follows:

The Committee bill, as amended, provides for Federal leadership and coordination of the resources necessary to develop and implement at the State and local community level effective programs for the prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency. Towards this end, it establishes a new Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention program within the Department of Justice, Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, to provide comprehensive national leadership for attacking the problems of juvenile delinquency and to insure coordination of all delinquency activities of the Federal government.⁵⁰

LEAA concluded that its block grants were not governed by these laws. In 1971 the courts held otherwise and by 1973 the adverse effects of the landmark decision in Ely v. Velde,⁴⁸ the first case to test the application of the block-grant concept to Federal strings, were being felt by states.

Ely v. Velde arose out of a block grant that LEAA made to the State of Virginia. In making the block grant, LEAA approved the comprehensive plan prepared by the State of Virginia in accordance with the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act. The plan indicated that Virginia intended to spend approximately $500,000 for a correctional facility. The expenditure of these funds was consistent with the Safe Streets Act. The plan did not specify where Virginia planned to build the facility.

At the time the Virginia plan was approved by LEAA, Virginia had not yet selected a final site. After the plan was approved, Virginia announced in a local newspaper that it intended to build a new penal facility in Green Springs, Virginia. Virginia did not notify LEAA of the selection of this site because it was not required by LEAA guidelines to do so.

Shortly after the announcement, a lawsuit was filed against the Administrator of LEAA and the Head of the Department of Corrections in Virginia. The lawsuit alleged that Virginia had failed to comply with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) and the recently-enacted National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) in selecting a site for the prison facility and that the Administrator of LEAA had failed to enforce NHPA and NEPA.

In their defense, LEAA and the State of Virginia contended that the LEAA program was a block-grant program and, under the LEAA law, the location for the penal facility was a state concern and not a Federal concern. LEAA contended that the State in expending LEAA funds did not have to comply with NEPA since the decision on where to build a penal facility was the state's decision and not subject to the review or disapproval of the Federal government. The district court agreed with this rationale and ruled against the plaintiffs.

The court of appeals disagreed and overruled the district court, making the following observation:

The LEAA insists that it is not obliged to comply—indeed it may not comply—with NHPA and NEPA because it has been disabled, when approving block grants, from imposing any con-

Chapter 3

LEAA IN THE STATES: 1968-1980

This chapter focuses on what happened to the LEAA program at the state level and particularly on the role played by the state planning agencies (SPAs). The lessons to be gained from the experience are rich but nonetheless complicated in what they offer to guide future criminal justice development. The chapter begins with a few remarks concerning our approach to assessment, and then examines the LEAA program in the states by following its evolution from 1968 to 1980. Employing the perspective provided by models of interorganizational and inter-governmental relations, the chapter ends with a preliminary assessment and analysis of the initial design and subsequent evolution of the program.

LEAA Program Objectives and an Approach to Assessment

The central objective of the Safe Streets Act was to build the capacity of state and local criminal justice agencies to combat crime. While the program enacted to achieve this effort was multifaceted, the lynchpin was a group of programmatic and funding priorities directed toward three capacity-building initiatives at the state-level: (1) comprehensive system planning and coordination, (2) program innovation, and (3) development of new crime-fighting technology. State planning agencies were created to supply essential direction to these efforts.

A common assumption among proponents of the LEAA program had been that state and local units of government lacked both sufficient financial resources and policy commitment to support change in the criminal justice system.¹ The block grants were intended not only to offer the necessary financial support for innovation but were also intended to alter criminal justice agency task environments (that is, whom and what criminal justice agencies responded to, or more formally, the source and kind of inputs and the demand for outputs made by the criminal justice agency's relevant environment).² To alter agency task environments, new agencies, supported largely through LEAA funds, were to advance comprehensive planning, innovation, and co-

AUGUST 24, 1977.

1. Purpose. This Circular promulgates standards for establishing consistency and uniformity among Federal agencies in the administration of grants to State, local, and federally recognized Indian tribal governments. Also included in the Circular are standards to insure the consistent implementation of sections 202, 203, and 204 of the Intergovernmental Cooperation Act of 1968 (82 Stat. 1101).

2. Supersession. The President by Executive Order 11717 transferred the functions covered by OMB Circular No. A-102 dated October 19, 1971, from the Office of Management and Budget to the General Services Administration. OMB Circular No. A-102 was revised and issued as Federal Management Circular 74-7 dated September 13, 1974. On December 31, 1975, the President superseded this order by Executive Order 11893 and transferred the functions covered by this Circular back to the Office of Management and Budget. FMC 74-7 is revised and reissued under its original designation of OMB Circular No. A-102.

3. Summary of significant changes. The revised Circular contains changes that bring it into general agreement with the more recent Circular A-110 which covers grants to universities, hospitals, and nonprofit organizations.

The more significant changes include:

(a) An amendment to the basic Circular to make it clear that the provisions of the attachments shall be applied to subgrantees except where they are specifically excluded.

(b) A provision that Federal agencies may accept the bonding policies and requirements of the grantee for construction contracts over $100,000 provided that the Government's interest is adequately protected.

(c) A revision to the criterion for the valuation of donated real and personal property to provide that the value of such property shall be based on fair market value. The original Circular provided that property should be based on the cost of the property less depreciation or fair market value, whichever was less.

(d) A provision that grantee audits should be made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, including Standards for Audit of Governmental Organizations, Programs, Activities and Functions, published by the General Accounting Office.

(e) A provision to require Federal agencies to pay within 30 days after the receipt of billing when the reimbursement method is used.

(f) A revision to the criterion for issuance of a letter of credit from $250,000 to $120,000.

(g) Deletion of the requirements for grantees to obtain prior approvals for budget revisions to grants under $100,000.

(h) Provision that title to real property funded partly or wholly by the Federal Government shall vest in the recipient.

(i) A revision to the criteria governing when a grantee may keep nonexpendable property without reimbursement to the Federal Government when it is no longer needed for any Federal program.

4. Background. The standards included in the attachments to this Circular replace the multitude of varying and oftentimes conflicting requirements in the same subject matter which have been burdensome to the State and local governments. Inherent in this standardization process is the concept of placing greater reliance on State and local governments. In addition, the Intergovernmental Cooperation Act of 1968 was passed, in part, for the purposes of: (a) Achieving the fullest cooperation and coordination of activities among levels of government; (b) improving the administration of grants-in-aid to the States; and (c) establishing coordinated intergovernmental policy and administration of Federal assistance program. This Act provided certain basic policies pertaining to administrative requirements to be imposed upon the States as a condition to receiving Federal grants. The implementing instructions of these policies were initially issued in Circular A-96. These instructions are modified herein in the interest of achieving further consistency in implementing that Act.

5. Applicable provisions of the Intergovernmental Cooperation Act of 1968. Federal agencies shall continue to follow the provisions of the Act, quoted below:

DEPOSIT OF GRANTS-IN-AID

Sec 202 No grant-in-aid to a State shall be required by Federal law or administrative regulation to be deposited in a separate bank account apart from other funds administered by the State. All Federal grant-in-aid funds made available to the States shall be properly accounted for as Federal funds in the accounts of the State. In each case the State agency concerned shall render regular authenticated reports to the appropriate Federal agency covering the status and the application of the funds, the liabilities and obligations on hand, and such other facts as may be required by said Federal agency. The head of the Federal agency and the Comptroller General of the United States or any of their duly authorized representatives shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records that are pertinent to the grant-in-aid received by the States.

SCHEDULING OF FEDERAL TRANSFERS TO THE STATES

Sec 203 Heads of Federal departments and agencies responsible for administering grant-in-aid programs shall schedule the transfer of grant-in-aid funds consistent with program purposes and applicable Treasury regulations, so as to minimize the time elapsing between the transfer of such funds from the United States Treasury and the disbursement thereof by a State, whether such disbursement occurs prior to or subsequent to such transfer of funds, or subsequent to such transfer of funds (Sic: States shall not be held accountable for interest earned on grant-in-aid funds, pending their disbursement for program purposes)

ELIGIBLE STATE AGENCY

Sec 204 Notwithstanding any other Federal law which provides that a single State agency or multimember board or commission must be established or designated to administer or supervise the administration of any grant-in-aid program, the head of any Federal department or agency administering such program may upon request of the Governor or other appropriate executive or legislative authority of the State responsible for determining or revising the organizational structure of State government, waive the single State agency or multimember board or commission provision upon adequate showing that such provision prevents the establishment of the most effective and efficient organizational arrangements within the State government and approve other State administrative structure or arrangements. Provided, That the head of the Federal department or agency determines that the objectives of the Federal statute authorizing the grant-in-aid program will not be endangered by the use of such other State structure or arrangements.

Some of the above provisions require implementing instructions and they are provided in several of the attachments to this Circular which deal with the specific subject matter.

6. Applicability and scope. The standards promulgated by this Circular apply to all Federal agencies responsible for administering programs that involve grants to State and local governments and federally recognized Indian tribal governments. However, agencies are encouraged to apply the standards to loan and loan guarantee programs to the extent practicable. If the enabling legislation for a specific grant program prescribes policies or requirements that differ from the standards provided herein, the provisions of the enabling legislation shall govern. Except where they are specifically excluded, the provisions of the attachments of this Circular shall be applied to subgrantees performing substantive work under grants that are passed through or awarded by the primary grantee if such subgrantees are States, local governments or federally recognized Indian tribal governments as defined in paragraph 7.

7. Definitions. For the purposes of this Circular:

(a) The term "grant" or "grant-in-aid" means money, or property in lieu of money, paid or furnished by the Federal Government to a State, local, or federally recognized Indian tribal government under programs that provide financial assistance through grant or contractual arrangements. The term does not include technical assistance programs which provide services instead of money or other assistance in the form of general revenue sharing, loans, loan guarantees, insurance, or contracts which are entered into and administered under procurement laws and regulations.

(b) The term "State" means any of the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, any territory or Wald; General Counsel for LEAA, Thomas Madden; the Acting Director of the National Institute of Law Enforcement, Blair Ewing; Mr. James Gregg, Acting Administrator of LEAA, and Paul Nejelski, also a member of the task force study group.

We welcome you all, ladies and gentlemen. We know that the Deputy Attorney General has sent a prepared statement, and we would welcome you to proceed with it in your own way.

TESTIMONY OF WALTER M. FIEDEROWICZ, ASSOCIATE DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL, ACCOMPANIED BY PATRICIA M. WALD, ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR THE OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS; BLAIR G. EWING, ACTING DIRECTOR OF THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF LAW ENFORCEMENT; PAUL A. NEJELSKI, OFFICE OF IMPROVEMENTS IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE; THOMAS J. MADDEN, GENERAL COUNSEL, LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION; AND JAMES M. H. GREGG, ACTING DIRECTOR OF THE LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION

Mr. FIEDEROWICZ. Although the Deputy Attorney General cannot be here today, I would like his statement introduced in the record.

I also have a prepared statement, fairly lengthy, of which I would like to read excerpts and have the full statement introduced in the record, with your permission.

Mr. CONYERS. All of the prepared statements will be incorporated into the record.

[The prepared statements of Messrs. Fiederowicz and Flaherty follow:]

STATEMENT OF PETER F. FLAHERTY, DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

The hearings which your Committee has scheduled to discuss the Department of Justice Study Group "Report to the Attorney General" come at a most opportune time because the Department is currently evaluating the recommendations contained in the Report for restructuring the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Attorney General Bell and I have assigned a high priority to the improvement of the effectiveness and responsiveness of the Department of Justice's program of assistance to state and local governments for crime control and criminal justice system improvement. Among our initiatives in this area was the creation of the Study Group and our charge to the Group that it present for our consideration recommendations for change in the program.

On June 23, 1977, the Study Group submitted its Report to Attorney General Bell and me. On June 30, 1977, the Attorney General publicly released the Report and asked for specific comments on the Report for a period of sixty days beginning on July 1, 1977.

In response to the Attorney General's request for public comment, the Attorney General and I have received a number of letters and reports which cogently discuss the LEAA program and its future. I find this response heartening. As the Attorney General noted in releasing the report: "Crime is a problem which touches every one of us. A Federal role in this area must be shaped with the greatest possible participation of the American people and their elected leaders."

At this time and until the end of the sixty-day comment period, the Attorney General and I will be studying the "Report to the Attorney General," as well as the various documents that we receive in response to the Attorney General's request for commentary upon the Report.

I know that the hearings which your Committee has scheduled will enhance the quality of the discussion of the issues raised in the Study Group's "Report to the Attorney General" and will assist Attorney General Bell and me to evaluate the Report and the issues which it addresses.

The Attorney General and I look forward to working closely with you to resolve those issues.

STATEMENT OF WALTER M. FIEDEROWICZ, OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. Chairman, I want to take this opportunity on behalf of the Department of Justice and the members of the Study Group to thank you for this opportunity to appear before your Committee to discuss its "Report to the Attorney General" regarding the restructuring of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The Attorney General has made the improvement of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and its programs one of his top priorities. In April of this year, he organized the Study Group and asked it to conduct a comprehensive review of the present LEAA program and to undertake a basic rethinking of the Department of Justice's program of assistance to state and local governments in crime control and criminal justice system improvement. On June 23, 1977, the Study Group submitted its Report to the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General. On June 30th, because of his belief that a "Federal role in this area must be shaped with the greatest possible participation of the American people and their elected leaders," Attorney General Bell publicly distributed the Report and solicited comments concerning the Report.

During the comment period, which extends through the end of August, the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General will be considering the Study Group's recommendations and the comments they receive from public officials and the general public. Only after such a process has been completed will the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General adopt a position concerning the recommendations contained in the "Report to the Attorney General". Accordingly, I would like to emphasize that the conclusions and recommendations of the Study Group in its "Report to the Attorney General" do not necessarily reflect the official views of the Department of Justice on the issues addressed in the Report. Similarly, I would like to emphasize that at these hearings my colleagues and I can speak only on behalf of the Study Group and not on behalf of the Department of Justice.

Today, I would like to briefly outline the process followed by the Study Group in examining the LEAA program and to highlight the key findings contained in the Report. In the session scheduled for Thursday it is my understanding that we will be asked to discuss the specific recommendations contained in the Report.

Serving with me on the Study Group were six individuals who have had a wide range of experience in and out of government. Patricia M. Wald, Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legislative Affairs, has among numerous other activities, served as a member of the President's Commission on Crime in the District of Columbia, as a consultant to the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Criminal Justice and on the Executive Committee of the Juvenile Justice Standards Project IJA-ABA.

Ronald L. Gainer currently serves as Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the Office for Improvements in the Administration of Justice. Prior thereto, Mr. Gainer served as an attorney in the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice and as Director of the Department's Office of Policy and Planning. In these positions, Mr. Gainer has had an opportunity to work on a number of criminal justice matters on a policy-making level and to review the operations of the LEAA program for the Department of Justice.

Paul A. Nejeleski, Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the Office for Improvements in the Administration of Justice, was employed by LEAA in its National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice in 1969 and 1970. He

"In summary, then, the lessons of the past nine years of the LEAA program have been mixed. The comprehensive review undertaken by the Study Group led to the conclusion that there is the need for a major restructuring of the Justice Department's program of assistance to state and local governments for crime control and criminal justice improvements. This major restructuring must take place in the context of both the positive as well as the negative lessons of the past. LEAA was always viewed as an experiment. It is time now to capitalize on the lessons of nine years of experience and design a better Federal response to the nation's crime problem."

Based upon its review of the LEAA program and its findings, the Study Group identified certain major issues pertinent to the future of LEAA, and made recommendations to the Attorney General concerning those issues. Mr. Nejelski concurred only with recommendations Nos. 1 and 2 of the Report.

As I mentioned at the outset, the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General are reviewing the Report. Over 3,000 copies of the Report have been distributed for public comment. A listing of the individuals and groups who have received copies of the Report is attached to my testimony. The Study Group will be reviewing and analyzing responses to the Report, as will the staff of the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General. Your hearings come at a most opportune time to assist the Department of Justice in its evaluation of LEAA and its future.

My colleagues and I would be pleased to attempt to respond to any questions the Committee may have.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE REPORT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

As of this date, over 3,000 copies of the report have been distributed among the following groups:

the State role should be strengthened. We will hear from the cities about how the city role should be strengthened. We have tried to develop an imaginative concept of arbitration. We have provided new flexibility so that if the cities do not get sufficient resources, they can get more under other formulas.

This legislation has flexibility. I think it makes clear that if we had a $6 billion authorization for this year, we might do a lot more. But we do not have that.

One of the principles of this administration has been trying to target limited resources through leveraging. We are not going to be able to do everything, but we can make this a responsible program. We can make the Federal Government's limited participation with local communities, States, and counties an important instrument to help meet one of the great concerns of the citizens of this Nation.

So I look forward to working with the chairman of this subcommittee and the other members. I regret I will not be able to hear the testimony, but I have reviewed the testimony, Attorney General Bell and Governor Hunt. I was prepared to develop some of these points with you. I think the testimony will be excellent and I will try to get back.

I give you the assurance that I have read your testimony in detail prior to the hearing. I will look forward to working with you.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator BIDEN. Without objection, Senator Kennedy, your statement shall become a part of this hearing record at this point.

[Material follows:]

STATEMENT OF SENATOR EDWARD M. KENNEDY AT OPEN HEARINGS ON THE REAUTHORIZATION OF THE LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION

Today, the Subcommittee on Criminal Laws and Procedures begins a comprehensive series of hearings on the future of the Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. These hearings are aimed at analyzing the structure, method, goals and future of the current LEAA program, which is subject to reauthorization next year. In a broader sense, these hearings provide us with an opportunity to examine the federal government's role in aiding local crime-fighting efforts.

The development of just, workable proposals for combating crime is an urgent concern of all of us. It is an intolerable situation in this Nation when our own citizens cannot walk down the streets without facing the dangers of robbery, mugging and other street crimes. Although there are no hidden panaceas for eliminating crime from our society, it is clear that certain measures can and must be taken to make our streets safe and our citizens secure. I am convinced that the federal government does have a limited, but very important role to play in this area. LEAA is both the symbol and the reality of the federal government's modest commitment to assist localities in this continuing struggle. We need LEAA.

The major legislative vehicle for reorganizing and restructuring the LEAA program is S. 3270, the "Justice System Improvement Act of 1978," which I introduced, with strong administration and bipartisan support last month. This bill is designed to make the LEAA program more efficient and effective. It has been personally endorsed by both President Carter and Attorney General Bell and should go a long way in eliminating the defects and faults which have plagued the LEAA program during the past decade.

These current defects are many: poor priorities; excessive redtape; lack of clearly delineated federal, state, and local crime-fighting roles; excessive state control of the program at the expense of the cities and counties; poor internal LEAA structural organization; absence of effective research and evaluation components; lack of clearly understandable purposes and goals; poor targeting of block grant funds and the failure of comprehensive planning.

But beyond these specific defects, there remain troublesome general questions concerning LEAA—why does LEAA remain the stepchild of the federal grant programs? Did LEAA get off on the wrong foot in 1968 with its extensive hardware and antiriot purchases? Is the program still perceived in ideological terms, as "law and order" oriented?

During the past year I have been engaged in lengthy discussions with the Department of Justice in an effort to make the program more effective. These discussions have been most cooperative and constructive. But the basic roots of S. 3270 go all the way back to the early 1970's, when I first proposed steps to improve the functioning of the program. For too long the Congress has been unable or unwilling to confront the structural and administrative defects which hinder LEAA. In 1970, 1973, and, especially in 1976, various amendments were made to the program in an effort to improve it; but these amendments, although important and constructive, were largely band-aid reforms, aimed at particular LEAA weaknesses. Major surgery was left for another day.

I continue to question, not the concept of federal assistance to aid localities in the war on crime, but, rather, the nature and administration of that assistance. Since 1968 LEAA has authorized expenditures totaling over $6 billion, and yet many, including myself, question how this money has been spent. I am, of course, aware that crime is primarily a local problem and that LEAA's role is, by necessity, limited. But the issue is not whether LEAA can cure the nation's crime problem—it cannot—but whether LEAA can be altered and restructured in order to make a more meaningful contribution. I believe it can.

S. 3270 attempts to provide the type of comprehensive reform which has not taken place during the last decade. I believe this bill and these hearings will go a long way in making LEAA the type of federal agency contemplated by Congress when it enacted the LEAA program in 1968.

The Justice System Improvement Act is not a palliative; it constitutes a major break with the existing program. All of the major concepts found in the current statute—block grant assistance, discretionary funding, the National Institute of Justice, criminal justice planning—are substantially restructured and reorganized to meet the constructive criticisms raised during recent years. Thus, the bill: (1) creates a separate National Institute of Justice and Bureau of Justice Statistics within the Justice Department—and outside of LEAA—and places both of them, in addition to LEAA under a new umbrella office—the Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics; (2) eliminates the annual comprehensive plan requirement and its attendant red tape; (3) replaces state planning agencies; (4) prohibits the expenditure of LEAA funds for equipment and hardware unless such expenditures are a necessary part of a larger innovative program; (5) gives special emphasis to judicial needs and programs; (6) provides direct financial assistance to larger cities and counties; (7) provides greater community and neighborhood involvement in choosing local priorities and (8) creates new criminal justice formulas to target funds to local areas of greatest need.

I look forward to the upcoming testimony on S. 3270 and other LEAA bills, as we attempt to fashion a final legislative product which will give LEAA an opportunity—long overdue—to make a more meaningful contribution to the local war on crime. The provisions of these bills are not etched in stone; I believe we can do an even better job. The hearings, beginning today and continuing into next year, will give us an extended opportunity to examine the strengths and weaknesses of the pending legislation. What is needed during the months ahead is the valuable input of those manning the front lines in the battle against crime—the police, judges, corrections officers, district attorneys and the defense bar. These hearings will also afford an opportunity for us to hear from the governors, mayors, county officials, criminal justice planners and all those who have a very real, dedicated interest in seeing the LEAA program work. The hearings are designed to assure that the American taxpayer will receive a better return on his or her investment in the war on crime than on the $6 billion spent so far. We owe it to the public to put this agency in order and to restore the confidence of the people that we are making progress in dealing with the problem of crime in America.

Senator BIDEN. Senator Thurmond?

Senator THURMOND. Mr. Chairman, today the Criminal Laws Subcommittee begins its oversight and reauthorization process for the

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, D.C., July 10, 1978.

Hon. WALTER F. MONDALE,
Vice President of the United States,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. VICE PRESIDENT: Enclosed for your consideration is a legislative proposal entitled the "Justice System Improvement Act of 1978" which amends in its entirety Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968. This proposal restructures the Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and is intended to assist state and local governments in improving the quality of their justice systems.

The Justice System Improvement Act provides a four-year authorization for justice assistance, research and statistics programs. The Act is significantly different than the current LEAA statute and makes major structural and substantive changes in the financial assistance, research and statistical programs now being administered by LEAA.

The Act is designed to correct the major criticisms directed at the LEAA program by simplifying the grant process and eliminating needless red tape, by the targeting of funds, by strengthening the role of local governments in the program, by eliminating wasteful use of LEAA funds, by increasing community participation in the LEAA program, and by improving justice research, demonstration, and statistics programs.

More specifically, the bill can be described as follows:

(1) STATE AND LOCAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

The bill replaces the current LEAA block and discretionary grant programs with a formula grant program, a priority grant program, and a discretionary grant program. Seventy percent of such funds must be set aside for formula grants, twenty percent for priority grants and ten percent for discretionary grants. These grants are to be administered by LEAA and LEAA is to be under the direct authority of the Attorney General. Under the bill, the Administrator of LEAA has final sign-off authority on all grants and contracts and reports to the head of an Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics established by the bill.

FORMULA GRANTS

The bill contemplates the submission to LEAA of a very simple three-year application which would not contain much of the verbiage that has led to larger paper submission requirements under current law. The application must be based on an analysis of the crime problems in the state and must include priorities for addressing these crime problems.

Under the new bill, the state is authorized to prepare those parts of the application which relate to state agencies and to cities under 100,000 population and counties under 250,000 population. The state courts through Judicial Coordinating Committees are authorized to prepare a single application for state court activities. Each major city and county is authorized to prepare a single application for their own activities. The State would then integrate these applications into a single application to be submitted to LEAA.

The state review of the application from major cities and counties under the bill is limited. Applications can only be reviewed for compliance with Federal requirements and state law, for duplication of other projects, and for inconsistencies with priorities. Any disagreements between state and large units of local government must be resolved through arbitration.

Formula grant funds are to be distributed on the basis of a national formula with a hold harmless provision which assures that no state receives less than a population share of the funds as under current law. The bill also contains provisions under which some states with particularly severe crime problems receive additional funds based on a formula that takes into account crime, population, tax effort, and criminal justice expenditures.

Major cities and counties receive a fixed allotment of funds from the state share. The amount of funds received is determined by a formula based on criminal justice expenditures.

An annual performance report must be submitted to LEAA each year by each state. LEAA must review this performance report and, if based on this performance report or on LEAA's independent evaluation it is determined that the funds were not being used effectively, LEAA must either suspend all funds going to a jurisdiction or suspend only those funds which would be otherwise used for an ineffective program or project.

The annual state comprehensive plans now being submitted to LEAA average about 1,000 pages. The single three-year application should not exceed 300-400 pages. Over a three-year period total paper submission, including amendments and annual performance reports, could be cut by 75 percent.

NATIONAL PRIORITY GRANTS

Under the priority grants provisions of the bill, the Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics is directed, after consultation with the National Institute of Justice, the Bureau of Justice Statistics, state and local governments, and others to establish programs for priority grant funding which have been shown through research, demonstration or evaluation, to be particularly effective in improving the criminal justice system and reducing crime.

In order to receive a priority grant, a state or local government must provide for 50 percent of the cost of the program or project. In providing such a matching share, a recipient can use the formula grant, general revenue sharing funds, state and local appropriations, or any other source of funds available for that jurisdiction.

DISCRETIONARY GRANTS

The bill also authorizes LEAA to award discretionary grants. Under the bill, these grants are to be used to fund programs for improving the criminal justice system which might not be otherwise undertaken under the formula or priority grant programs.

(2) NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF JUSTICE

The bill creates a National Institute of Justice within the Justice Department that replaces two existing units (the National Institute for Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice and the National Institute of Corrections) and part of a third unit (Institute of Juvenile Justice Development and Research). The bill authorizes the National Institute of Justice to undertake basic and applied research in the areas of civil and criminal justice and to conduct evaluations and sponsor demonstrations in these areas. To insure the independence and integrity of the research operation, the bill gives the Director of the National Institute of Justice sign-off authority for all grants and contracts to be awarded by the National Institute of Justice. To insure administrative responsibility, the Director of the National Institute of Justice reports to the Director of the Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics. The bill establishes a National Institute of Justice advisory board to be appointed by the Attorney General and to consist of a broadly based group of the academic and research community, justice practitioners, state and local officials, officials of neighborhood and community organizations, and citizens. The board would have authority to develop, in conjunction with the Director, policies and priorities for the National Institute of Justice.

(3) BUREAU OF JUSTICE STATISTICS

The bill also creates a Bureau of Justice Statistics within the Department of Justice under the direct authority of the Attorney General. Under the bill, the Director of the Bureau of Justice Statistics reports to the Director of the Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics and has final sign-off authority for all grants and contracts to be awarded by the Bureau of Justice Statistics. The Bureau of Justice Statistics is authorized to collect, analyze and disseminate statistics on criminal and civil justice matters.

The bill establishes a Bureau of Justice Statistics advisory board to be appointed by the Attorney General and to consist of a broadly based group of researchers, statisticians, justice practitioners, state and local officials and citizens. The board would have authority to recommend to the Director policies and priorities for the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

Prompt and favorable consideration of the proposed "Justice System Improvement Act of 1978" is recommended. In addition to the bill, there is enclosed a section-by-section analysis. The Office of Management and Budget has advised that there is no objection to the submission of this legislative proposal to the Congress and that its enactment would be in accord with the program of the President.

Yours sincerely,

COMMITTEE APPROVES LEAA REORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- The House Judiciary Committee, by a 24 to 6 vote, approved today a bill reorganizing the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration which places increased emphasis on anti-crime programs in local communities.

Rep. Peter W. Rodino, chairman of the committee and the bill's primary sponsor, said it "provides a significant improvement in LEAA's structure and organization, which will make it more effective in helping local governments fight crime."

He said the bill "offers an important balance in the areas of involvement for LEAA, while putting special emphasis on those areas which have proven most successful -- especially the Community Anti-Crime program."

"If we are ever to make real progress in reducing crime, we must encourage efforts by local citizens who are most familiar with the dangers and the causes of crime," he added.

The bill would require 10% of all LEAA funds to go for the Community Anti-Crime program which promotes crime prevention activities by non-governmental community groups.

The bill also provides a minimum of 20% of LEAA funds for juvenile delinquency programs with primary emphasis on serious juvenile offenders.

Rodino said "the bill is designed to drastically reduce the red tape which has plagued the process of getting federal assistance to states and local governments."

By requiring state and local governments to submit one application every three years instead of annually, the bill is expected to reduce paperwork by 60%.

The bill also would set up new "priority grants" which would provide extra money to programs that have proven especially effective in combatting crime.

A Bureau of Justice Statistics also would be established to collect and analyze information concerning crime, juvenile delinquency and the operation of the criminal justice system at various levels of government.

Rodino said he would "push very strongly for this bill's approval by the House because crime is a problem which concerns all of us -- and LEAA is the only instrument that the federal government has to assist states and localities to fight crime."

RODINO LEADS FIGHT TO SAVE LEAA

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Peter W. Rodino, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is leading a fight to save the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration from drastic budget cuts in 1980.

Rodino has sent a letter to all House members asking them to vote against all amendments to the Fiscal 1980 Budget Resolution which would eliminate or reduce the amount Congress can authorize for LEAA in 1980.

"I am convinced that now is not the time to abandon LEAA, which is our last remaining federal commitment to the fight against street crime," Rodino said.

"I think that the recent climate to cut expenditures across-the-board can be irresponsible when you are considering vital programs," he added.

He pointed out that the $546 million proposed by the 1980 budget resolution is a modest amount to spend for criminal justice assistance -- substantially below that appropriated for fiscal 1979."

He also added, "Crime continues to rank very high among the concerns of Americans, particularly those in our cities; yet less than one percent of the federal assistance that will be awarded to state and local governments next year will be allocated to LEAA under the 1980 budget resolution."

He promised to "make an all-out effort to save this program because I know how important it is to our states and localities. There must be a national commitment to fight crime, and if we abandon LEAA we will be turning our backs on the problem."

The House will be considering the 1980 budget resolution on Monday and Tuesday next week.

Rodino also announced that the House Judiciary Committee would begin on Tuesday marking up legislation to reorganize and restructure the LEAA.

"The committee's goal will be to allow the successful projects under LEAA to continue, while eliminating the less productive aspects of the program," Rodino said.

He noted that "the costs of more than 65% of the projects initially funded by LEAA are now financed by the participating communities or states."

Rodino is the principal sponsor of an LEAA reauthorization proposal in his committee, which he introduced for President Carter this year.

He said that the Judiciary Committee "must complete consideration of LEAA by May 15th according to the time limits established by the House budget process.

"If the House cuts the Budget authority for LEAA, it will tie the hands of the committee to decide the most constructive proposal to reorganize the agency.

"Crime is a national problem and LEAA is the only instrument that the federal government has to assist states and localities to fight crime."

Sec. 404. The Attorney General may arrange with and reimburse the heads of other Federal departments and agencies for the performance of any of his functions under this Act, and, as necessary or appropriate, delegate any of his powers under this Act with respect to any part thereof; and authorize the redelegation of such powers.

Sec. 405. The Attorney General is authorized—

(a) the provisions of this Act;

(b) regulations promulgated by the Attorney General under this Act; or

(c) the law enforcement and criminal justice plan submitted in accordance with the provisions of this Act; the Attorney General shall notify such grantee that further payments shall not be made (or in his discretion that further payments shall not be made for activities in which there is such failure), until there is no longer such failure.

Sec. 408. Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to authorize any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over any police force or other agency of any State or local law enforcement and criminal justice system.

Sec. 409. Unless otherwise specified in this Act, the Attorney General shall carry out the programs provided for in this Act during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968, and the four succeeding fiscal years.

Sec. 410. Not more than 15 per centum of the sums appropriated or allocated for any fiscal year to carry out the purpose of this Act shall be used within any one State.

Sec. 411. The Attorney General, after appropriate consultation with representatives of State and local governments, is authorized to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to implement the purpose of this Act, including regulations which—

(a) provide that a grantee will from time to time, but not less often than annually, submit a report evaluating accomplishments and cost-effectiveness of activities funded under this Act;

(b) provide for fiscal control, sound accounting procedures and periodic reports to the Attorney General regarding the application of funds paid under this Act; and

(c) establish criteria to achieve an equitable distribution among the States of assistance under this Act.

Sec. 412. On or before August 31, 1968, and each year thereafter, the Attorney General shall report to the President and to the Congress on activities pursuant to the provisions of this Act during the preceding fiscal year.

Sec. 413. For the purpose of carrying out this Act, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $50,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968; and for each succeeding fiscal year such sums as the Congress may hereafter appropriate. Funds appropriated for the purpose of carrying out this Act shall remain available until expended.

TITLE V—DEFINITIONS

Sec. 501. As used in this Act—

(a) "Law enforcement and criminal justice" means all activities pertaining to crime prevention or the enforcement and administration of the criminal law, including but not limited to activities involving police, prosecution or defense of criminal cases, courts, probation, corrections and parole.

course, the Governors often play a vital role in these functions. The attorneys general of the States have general supervision of all major criminal prosecutions and the trials. There is a very close supporting relationship between States and cities. For example, how can it be said that New York City is free and clear of State government and does not have any close ties or relationship in law enforcement. I cannot follow that reasoning.

Would you have a comment on this? It is not limited to New York, but, generally, I cannot see any difference between this field and any other fields.

Attorney General CLARK. I guess that police activities were the first function of cities if not of government itself. It has been a function we have left to the cities in this country. New York City provides an illustration. There are 28,000 policemen there. The annual budget of the New York City Police Department exceeds the budget of the U.S. Department of Justice by $400 million. As far as I know the State does not provide any funds for police protection in New York City. They supply no advice. Only last year they established an office in the State government involving one man and one staff assistant. What can they contribute to the mighty police department of New York City, which has protected the people for generations.

As far as the powers of the State attorneys general are concerned, the average attorney general of a State exercises no significant criminal powers. Many have no legal authority in this area. Those that do have common law powers find it difficult to use them. A rare exception is the State of California where there is a department of justice but its functions, too, are limited. It tends to be on the prosecution side, rather than to involve police protection. And it exercises no control over the local district attorneys in their handling of prosecutions.

Senator HRUSKA. Your bill emphasizes that we are prosecutors of cases.

Attorney General CLARK. Yes.

Senator HRUSKA. Those claiming to be in the law enforcement part of justice make up a very small percentage.

Attorney General CLARK. Yes, very small.

Senator HRUSKA. In many of the Middle Western States the Attorney General prosecutes all appeals from trial courts and in many instances participates in the prosecution of cases and trials in State district courts.

Attorney General CLARK. There would be no need for a Governor veto there because he would be directly involved, presumably.

Senator HRUSKA. Of course, when we experience breakdown in a city police force due to either civil commotion or massive civil disobedience, the Governor steps in, does he not?

Attorney General CLARK. He has to sometimes, unfortunately.

Senator HRUSKA. In thinking of the Governor, I wonder if the fear of bypassing the State in a program of this kind would not grip the heart as much as other programs which they have discussed so vigorously.

Attorney General CLARK. My judgment is that it would not because police departments are old-line agencies with which the Governors have had a very minimal experience, connection, and relationship.

Senator HRUSKA. I do not know if you have convinced me. I just wanted to ascertain from you whether that had received any thought.

Such questioning is going to be raised on the Senate floor because there are many Governors who say you cannot be partners with the Federal Government.

The Federal Government is dealing out this money and after it becomes a substantial amount the municipality is hooked. If municipalities do not substantially comply with the plan, that money can be withdrawn and they have no alternative. They must run that department the way the Attorney General says they must, pursuant to that plan. Control then slips away from the municipality and goes into the Attorney General's Office.

Is that not about the size of it?

Attorney General CLARK. No. Not at all. That would be both a violation of the mandate and spirit of section 408. I think as a practical matter the Attorney General will not run the police department because they will not let him and because he does not want to. He would not even if he could do so.

And the amount of money contributed by the Federal Government will be a small fraction of the total investment and it could hardly be the controlling part.

Senator HRUSKA. You can go as high as 60 percent of these budgets for administrative improvement. The expenditure of 60 percent is a big percentage.

Attorney General CLARK. Sixty percent of the increase above 105 percent the first year, 110 percent the next year, 115 percent—

Senator HRUSKA. It is only to an improvement component which this 60 percent applies?

Attorney General CLARK. That is all.

Senator HRUSKA. Will it not in due time be a sizable amount?

Attorney General CLARK. It will become a large sum in some cases in due time.

Senator HRUSKA. Now you refer to section 408 which states that nothing contained in this act shall be construed to authorize any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over any police force or agency of any State or local law enforcement and criminal justice system.

That is a most noble statement made in good faith. Yet the preceding section says:

Whenever the Attorney General, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to a grantee under this Act, finds that, with respect to any payments made under this Act, there is a substantial failure to comply with—

(a) the provisions of this Act—

And (b) and (c).

Considering the vast discretionary power invested in the Attorney General in this act and its overwhelming discretion in connection with this program, any aspect of the plan that has been submitted and approved must be OK'd by the Attorney General. Thus, if he feels it is being maladministered and not substantially complied with, he will say, "Sorry, boys, the show is over. No more money."

Would that constitute control and supervision in your judgment? It is well intended and filled with the spirit of wanting improved law enforcement service and all of its processes, but is it not a pretty compulsive situation?

Attorney General CLARK. No. I think it is necessary to the integrity of the act that its provisions be complied with and its regulations be Attorney General CLARK. It can apply to any need of a police department or a corrections agency or a court.

Senator THURMOND. You have got a bill here then in which any police department of any city in this Nation can ask Washington, our Government, to help to supply uniforms and clothing to their policemen; is that right?

Attorney General CLARK. Well, that is a peculiar way of thinking about it. But they could come out that way. We require, however, that they have spent 105 percent before they are entitled to anything from the Federal Government. We would look at the whole budget together. Why in the world they would take out of all their budget uniforms and put it in the Federal part? Whether they could get the funds when they actually sought them for such a limited purpose or not is another question. But these funds would be available for any need of a police department that met the qualifications.

Senator THURMOND. Would that include shoes, too?

Attorney General CLARK. It could include shoes; yes.

Senator THURMOND. Well now, suppose the Federal Government said to the police departments over the country, suppose your director says, "Now, I think the policemen will look handsomer, better, and appear more disciplined if they all used blue uniforms and black shoes, and we are going to withhold funds unless you buy blue uniforms and black shoes."

Would your director have that authority to do that?

Attorney General CLARK. Well, I think we would start looking for a new director about that time.

Senator THURMOND. I know, but that is not the question. I am visualizing some Attorney General other than Mr. Clark now, someone who might succeed you some day and be arbitrary. Would your director have the right to withhold funds if the police departments did not use the color uniform he wanted or the color shoes or the quality of uniform or shoes that he wanted them to use?

Attorney General CLARK. He has to have broad discretion, and in theory he would probably have that discretion under the bill.

As a practical matter, the opportunity to exercise it would be very limited. The police are an independent type of person, and I just do not think that is a real possibility.

Senator THURMOND. But you think he would have that authority?

Attorney General CLARK. Yes, sir.

Senator THURMOND. Well, then, would your director also have the authority to say that, "We don't think a Colt is a very good pistol. It doesn't get results, and, therefore, we are not going to give any funds unless you buy Smith & Wesson pistols."

Would your director have the authority to withhold funds unless they used Smith & Wesson pistols?

Attorney General CLARK. I think if some police department sought Federal funds for a type of weapon that we thought was dangerous or unreliable or otherwise defective, that we would have a duty to withhold funds.

Senator THURMOND. So the Director would have the authority to withhold funds as to the kind of weapon or the quality of weapon that the city police department or the State law enforcement agency would purchase?

CONTROLLING CRIME

Attorney General CLARK. The probability of an exercise of discretion like that is very, very slight. It depends, unless—

Senator THURMOND. I am not saying how he would use this discretion, Mr. Attorney General. I am just asking, I am trying to get at the authority the bill gives, whether he would have the authority.

Attorney General CLARK. The bill gives broad discretion.

Senator THURMOND. It gives broad discretion.

Attorney General CLARK. Yes.

Senator THURMOND. So your director would have the right to withhold funds if he saw fit unless a policeman used the kind of weapons that he said they must use or use the kind of uniforms that he says they must use or use the kind of shoes that he said they must use.

Attorney General CLARK. No. I think that really is very remote. It is necessary under the bill to give broad discretion. But if it came to the specificity you are talking about, such an exercise of discretion would probably violate section 408 itself. It is so unreal.

Senator THURMOND. It is not contemplated, but is it possible?

Attorney General CLARK. I would say when it reaches the level that you have now reached with shoes and uniforms and guns and all these other things there would begin to be control of the police department, and there would be a violation of section 408 of the act, and, therefore, it would be in violation of the act.

Senator THURMOND. Well, I took up each one separately, and you said he would have the authority, and then I summarized it and lumped it together, and now you say you do not. What is your position?

Attorney General CLARK. My position is as stated that the case you pose would be clearly arbitrary, when you add them up the way you do—in fact, any one by itself would seem highly arbitrary to me and so unrealistic as to not be a possibility.

Senator THURMOND. Who is going to control whether he is arbitrary or not? He makes the final decision, does he not?

Attorney General CLARK. Well, there are lots of checks and balances that we have in the system, and one is we would hope he would always try to accomplish the purposes of the act, and if he proceeded the way you indicated, I think the act would break down.

Senator THURMOND. That is not the question. I asked you who would call his hand if he became arbitrary.

Attorney General CLARK. Well, perhaps, with you Senators up here, you would help and there would be an Attorney General and other people.

Senator THURMOND. That is not it. I mean in the executive branch. Suppose you had a director under you or some other Attorney General who was arbitrary, and he was trying to bring about conformity in every way, shape and form, just completely arbitrary. Now, who is above him to correct him?

Attorney General CLARK. We worked for these 19 months under the Law Enforcement Assistance Act. There is complete discretion in the director there. He can grant or not grant. There are no criteria or standards set whatever, and we have not had any complaints of any type that you raise.

Senator THURMOND. In other words, he does have the discretion but you do not think he would be arbitrary, is that it?

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE AN AMICUS BRIEF

The States of New York, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oregon, Vermont, and Washington, and the District of Columbia respectfully move for leave to file a brief as amici curiae in support of Chicago's opposition to the motion to dismiss filed by the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) on January 3, 2018 (ECF No. 137). Plaintiff and defendant consent to the filing of the motion. For the reasons set forth below, the motion should be granted.

This Court may permit the filing of an amicus brief when the amicus has an interest that may be affected by the case, or "when the amicus has unique information or perspective that can help the court." Ryan v. Commodity Futures Trading Comm'n, 125 F.3d 1062, 1063 (7th Cir. 1997).

Here, the amici States have important interests that are affected by the three immigration-related conditions that DOJ seeks to impose on the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant (Byrne-JAG) program. The amici States have received law-enforcement grants under Byrne-JAG and its predecessor grant programs for decades, and they have used those funds to support a diverse array of critical law-enforcement programs, ranging from efforts to reduce gun violence to programs to combat opioid addiction. Moreover, DOJ has announced that the immigration-related conditions imposed on States will be substantively identical to the conditions that are being challenged in this litigation. The amici States therefore face the same choice as Chicago: accept unconstitutional conditions or forego critical law-enforcement funding. Based on their strong interests in this case, the amici States have already filed an amicus brief in the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Seventh Circuit supporting the Court's nationwide preliminary injunction. See Br.

for Amici Curiae States of New York et al., City of Chicago v. Sessions, No. 17-2991 (7th Cir. Jan. 4, 2018), ECF No. 76.

In addition to offering the amici States' perspective on the new conditions, the proposed amicus brief identifies legislative history relevant to the Court's analysis of the proposed condition requiring applicants to certify compliance with 8 U.S.C. § 1373. The history makes clear that 34 U.S.C. § 10153(a), which requires Byrne-JAG applicants to certify compliance with "applicable Federal laws," refers only to statutes that, by their terms, apply to federal grant-making, and not collateral statutes like § 1373.

The proposed amicus brief also discusses the implications of another relevant statute, 34 U.S.C. § 10228(a), which is located in the same chapter of the United States Code as the Byrne-JAG statute, and provides that "[n]othing in this chapter or any other Act shall be construed to authorize any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over any police force or any other criminal justice agency of any State or any political subdivision thereof." As the brief explains, the text and legislative history of § 10228(a) make clear that DOJ's immigration-related conditions are invalid because they attempt to commandeer grant recipients in a number of ways.

No party would be prejudiced by the filing of this amicus brief, which is filed on the same day as Chicago's opposition to DOJ's motion to dismiss, and two weeks before DOJ's reply is due on February 15, 2018.

For the foregoing reasons, the motion for leave to file the proposed amicus brief should be granted. The proposed amicus brief is attached as Exhibit 1 to this motion.
